Blood found in Hoffa case analyzed as non-human

DETROIT (UPI) — The FBI has determined that blood found inside a car tied to the investigation of James R. Hoffa's disappearance 11 days ago is not human blood, sources said Sunday.

The blood, analyzed by FBI chemists in Washington, was found on the front seat of a car driven by Hoffa's foster son Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien the day the former Teamsters Union boss apparently was abducted from the parking lot of a fashionable suburban restaurant.

O'Brien, believed by Hoffa's family to be closely connected to the disappearance, told UPI earlier Sunday the blood was from a frozen salmon he delivered to the wife of a Detroit Teamsters union official.

An FBI spokesman in Washington had "no comment either to affirm or deny" the report about the bloodstains.

The car O'Brien used belongs to Joey Giacalone, son of reputed Detroit Mafia chief Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalonelli officials in Detroit scheduled their first news conference on the investigations for 2 p.m. today.

O'Brien, now honeymooning in West Memphis, Ark., told UPI the FBI knew about the blood stain last Wednesday when he surfaced in Detroit for four hours of questioning. He accused the FBI of "harassing Joe" by impounding young Giacalone's 1975 maroon Mercury over the weekend.

O'Brien said "someone in the government" was leaking information about answers he gave to investigators and making him "look like an idiot" because the FBI now is insisting he keep quiet.

"I was sincere with them and they were sincere with me," O'Brien said. "That's the way I've always been. But now with all this information flying around it puts me in a pair of scissors — they're making me look like an idiot — because I have to stand there and say 'no comment.'"

An FBI spokesman in Detroit said the news conference Monday would "answer the questions that have been piling up" since Hoffa's disappearance July 30. So far, FBI officials have refused to comment on any aspect of the investigation.

Meanwhile, Hoffa's ailing wife, Josephine, his son, James P. Hoffa, 31, and his sister, Mrs. Barbara Crancer, of St. Louis, Mo., kept a vigil at the fallen Teamster czar's summer home at Lake Orion, 40 miles northwest of Detroit.

Worst rioting in four years erupts in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — The most widespread rioting in Northern Ireland in four years erupted Sunday into street gunbattles that left two dead, one a 4-year-old girl, and homes blazing in Belfast.

Police said the 4-year-old Roman Catholic girl was fatally shot in a crossfire between British troops and Catholic snipers a half-mile from the "peace line" dividing the rival Catholic and Protestant strongholds of Falls and Shankill Roads.

A sniper who police said fired from the roof of the Royal Victoria Hospital shot and killed a 15-year-old Catholic boy as he fled from pursuit by a British army patrol. They said the boy was part of a gang of youths attacking the patrol with rocks and bottles in one of hundreds of running battles throughout the day.

Housewives clutching their children and meager household belongings fled their blazing homes near the peace-line. Catholics claimed gangs of Protestants hurling gasoline bombs were responsible for burning out the families.

Security officials said some of the fires were set off by trucks and other vehicles overturned by Catholics battling with troops seeking to drive them off the streets.

Police officials said the violence was the worst since August 1971, when Britain began jailing hundreds of suspected Irish Republican Army members without trial. The current outburst arose out of province-wide demonstrations marking the anniversary and demanding the practice be ended.

Nixon agrees to tape interviews for TV

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon will tape four "no holds barred" 90-minute television memoirs with British television personality David Frost for international airing after the 1976 elections, Frost announced Sunday.

Frost, a former talk show host, said "the amount of money involved is confidential. I'm relying on Mr. Nixon's word that he would speak out in candor. I can not even give you a ballpark figure on the financial arrangements."

Frost said the ex-president agreed to more than 20 taping sessions at his San Clemente, Calif., home, which will begin sometime later this year.

"The former president has neither requested nor has he received any editorial control, whether in terms of the content or editing of the programs, the use of news reel footage or by way of prior knowledge of any of the questions," Frost said.

"No subject, including Watergate, has been barred."

Begins working vacation

Ford visits refugees

FORT SMITH, Ark. (UPI) — Thousands of Vietnamese refugees — many of them cheering, clapping and waving welcome signs — greeted President Ford warmly Sunday as he paid his first visit to a staging camp for Indochina refugees.

An estimated 18,000 Vietnamese lined the road for three miles outside Ft. Chaffee refugee camp near Fort Smith in western Arkansas to watch the vacationing President arrive in his black Cadillac limousine.

The President and Mrs. Ford stopped off in Fort Smith in route to a 15-day "working vacation" in Vail, Colo., to dedicate a local hospital, visit the Ft. Chaffee camp and make some political courtesy calls.

Ford stripped off his jacket in the 98-degree Arkansas heat as he drove out to the refugee camp for the enthusiastic mass welcome and a 45-minute visit he described as "inspirational."

Nearly the entire refugee population of about 21,000 turned out to see the President at some point in his visit, with most of them lining the highway in baking sun behind restraining ropes.

Many cheered, clapped and waved as Ford passed. Others simply smiled. The younger refugees wore the blue jeans and other casual western dress of their new land, while older ones wore native garb and held umbrellas against the sun.

Inside the relocation center, cheers welled up from time to time as the President moved from one facility to another. A crowd of about 200 held up hand-lettered signs reading "Vietnamese Fishermen Welcome President Gerald Ford" and similar greetings.

Outside a camp day care center, Vietnamese youngsters sang a song about coconuts in English to the obvious delight of the President.

Asked his impression of the camp, Ford told a reporter: "It makes all the efforts of so many people really worthwhile. It's so inspirational to see so many young people and old people getting an opportunity to be a part of America."

As Ford toured a hospital ward, an elderly Vietnamese man wearing blue pajamas stopped him, shook his hand and said in halting English. "All of the people at Fort Chaffee thank you very much for your help, and we pray for you, your family and your people."

Emerging from a barracks, Ford drew more applause and a long, sighing "aaaah" from a crowd gathered there.

Ford told Donald D. MacDonald, senior civil coordinator at Ft. Chaffee, "I want to thank you on behalf of all Americans who I understand properly and enthusiastically opened their hearts to the thousands who suffered adversity with us."

One refugee, identified as Vu Tring Ky, 67, handed Ford a letter at one point in which he asked that refugees be given plots of land as settlers under the Homestead Act.

The President also met a Vietnamese family — a young man, his wife holding an infant in her arms and three other children — about to depart for their new home in Ford's native Grand Rapids, Mich. They gave him a watercolor one of them had painted in the camp.

Ford returned to Fort Smith for a meeting with Arkansas Republican party leaders.

As the Fords flew westward from Washington on a 15-day "working vacation" at Vail, Colo., White House press secretary Ron Nessen told reporters Ford believes the adverse public opinion that greeted the refugee influx at its outset last spring has largely "blown over."

Witness vanishes in Hearst case

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walter J. Scott, a mystery figure in the Patricia Hearst case, disappeared last week after warning an FBI agent that he intended to give an affidavit to defense attorneys in the case, his brother said Sunday.

The brother, sports activist Jack Scott who is under subpoena to appear before a federal grand jury, also said Walter is a computer specialist who has worked for various federal intelligence and security agencies through private firms for the past 10 years.

"Walter told us he is afraid for his life," Jack said, claiming that he last saw his brother Thursday in the lobby of the New York Hilton Hotel.

"He went to make a telephone call to David Rack, an FBI agent who befriended him, to tell him — as a courtesy — that he planned to make a statement in our behalf," Jack said. "I haven't seen him since. In fact, I still have his luggage."

John J. Scott, father of the two brothers, said in his Las Vegas, Nev., home that Walter telephoned him that Thursday night and said: "The FBI has me holed up and I can't get away."

Walter J. Scott has been a mysterious figure in the Hearst case for eight months, ever since his younger brother and Jack's wife, Micki, were first sought by the FBI for questioning in the Hearst case. Federal investigators say they have evidence that fugitives associated with Miss Hearst spent time in a Pennsylvania farmhouse rented last summer by Jack and Micki Scott.

The couple has refused to cooperate with the probe, claiming the government is abusing the grand jury system. Mrs. Scott was subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury in Harrisburg, Pa., last week but was granted a 10-day postponement. Jack faces a grand jury appearance Sept. 4.

Protection of secrets falls short

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director William Colby said Sunday his spy agency has "very much" less power than even ordinary government departments to protect official secrets.

Colby's opinion and his strong recommendation for a new law against leaks of classified information, were sharply disputed by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., in a parallel interview appearing in the new U.S. News and World Report.

Cranston said the United States already has more protection of official secrets than it needs. The CIA, he said, "has had too much power — and this has led to a lot of abuse."

The CIA director proposed a new law making it illegal for present or past intelligence personnel to divulge secrets. But he said any new law should expressly prohibit prosecution of a reporter who obtains secret information and publishes it.

"The present law applies essentially only to people who turn secrets over to a foreign power with intent to injure the United States."

Portuguese Communists fire on Catholic protestors

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Communists firing guns and throwing rocks from inside their headquarters injured a number of persons Sunday at the end of a Roman Catholic demonstration which drew tens of thousands to the northern town of Braga.

Hospital spokesmen said they treated about 20 persons for injuries, including three with gunshot wounds. Among those hurt were women and children and three foreign newsmen.

Police said the Communists twice fired into the crowds after marchers heading home from the demonstration exchanged insults with party members standing on the balconies of the headquarters.

Army troops rushed to the area and threw up a protective cordon after disarming the Communists inside the building. A party spokesman inside the headquarters said the crowd burned the Communist flag flying outside the building and broke most of the windows before the troops arrived.

He said the Communists inside the building with him vowed to defend the headquarters with their lives.

"We are going to stay here forever," he said. "We will never let them into the building."

As he spoke, about 5,000 persons outside shouted "Down with communism" and "Out with the Communists."

An estimated 30,000 to 60,000 persons had demonstrated earlier in the streets of the city, 200 miles north of Lisbon, police said. In recent weeks, Communist party headquarters in dozens of towns in the conservative north have been assaulted and ransacked.

In the town of Fafe Communist gunmen firing automatic rifles killed two persons last Wednesday.

In a related development, an anti-Communist document signed by nine dissenting officers and circulating among soldiers reportedly gained wide support.

But the continuing grass-roots pressure in the conservative North and growing dissatisfaction in the army had no apparent effect on Lisbon's ruling three-man junta.

City councils in the Braga district had asked the church to postpone Sunday's demonstration because of increasing anti-Communist violence recently in the North. But the organizers ignored their appeal and went ahead with the rally, which was called to protest alleged Communist domination of the news media and curbs on democratic freedoms.

Death strikes Cherry Valley family

Grim chapter in Monroe's history

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a weekly series by Bobby Westbrook on some of the historic places in the area, the people who built them and how the years have changed them in a "countdown through 1975 toward the bicentennial year of 1976.")

By BOBBY WESTBROOK

DELAWARE WATER GAP — One of the grimmest chapters in the history of the Old Stone House on Cherry Valley Road, just outside the borough of Delaware Water Gap, also shows the grimmer aspects of "the good old days" when diseases now controlled by vaccines or drugs ran rampant.

It was to the dread "black" diphtheria that Andrew Albert lost nine members of his family within nine days and the Old Stone House earned its title "Diphtheria House." Andrew, son of a Bushkill shoemaker, was living in the house in 1890 when he joined the Presbyterian Church of the Mountain in Water Gap.

His wife, Emma, had joined the church earlier and many of his nine children had been baptized there. The wholesale tragedy started four years later. The Stroudsburg Times of Jan. 4, 1894 carried the notice "The Andrew Albert family has lost a bright six-year-old boy. The little fellow had grip, then developed pneumonia and soon sickened and died."

The next week's issue reported the death of an older sister, Lizzie, bride of Theodore Kulp for less than two months, and the illness of two other children, from the disease then diagnosed as diphtheria.

"The board of health has summoned an experienced nurse from the city," the paper reported.

It is from this nurse, a Miss Eberwein, a graduate of the Training School of Memorial Hospital, Orange, N.J., that we have a first-hand account of what happened inside the old stone house during those fatal days. In six pages of graphic detail, she describes conditions, symptoms, treatment and deathbed scenes in a journal "The Trained Nurse", published in May, 1894 a copy of which is now in the Anthony Dutoit Museum in Water Gap.

Nurse reports

Arriving at the Water Gap Station on Saturday Jan. 4, she was met by an overseer of the poor and driven to the house, where she first learned that the disease was diphtheria. She found "the family poor and the house in dilapidated condition."

She also found the father and an older brother worn out from the constant care they had been giving the patients; the mother ill and three of the children desperately sick in an overheated upstairs bedroom.

Following the written instructions left by the doctor, she gave medicine, applied hot applications to their necks, swollen to twice the normal size, swabbed their mouths, painted their tonsils with iodine and gave them food prepared by their brother, Edward.

Addie, 10, the most seriously ill, died at 2 a.m. on Sunday, begging to be buried in her new Christmas dress with her doll in her arms. The nurse complied with her requests, wrapped the body in a sheet soaked in bichloride of mercury, and with the doctor's help carried it downstairs where it remained all day because the undertaker would not remove it until dark.

The doctor carried the bedding out and drove six miles from town to bury it under half a barrel of chloride of lime and dirt, doing the work himself because "no man would come within 30 rods of the house". They also dug a hole on the side of the hill in which to throw the cloths used in treatment.

Meanwhile Nurse Eberwein was trying to comfort the frantic Mabel, 14, who had witnessed her sister's struggle for life. She stayed with her until Edward relieved her when she snatched two hours of sleep, wrapped in a "comfortable" on the floor by an open window.

The two were crowned over the weekend during the 1975 National Convention of Hoboes held in Britt, Iowa. (UPI)

What's news

New crop estimate coming

WASHINGTON — Working behind locked and guarded doors, Agriculture Department statisticians today will draft and issue a new estimate of the size of the nation's 1975 crop harvest. The report was awaited here and abroad as a clue to future food price prospects and government policy on further grain sales to the Soviet Union. It will estimate production of corn and other feed grains, wheat, soybeans, rice, sugar crops and other major agricultural products on the basis of August 1 conditions. Trusted technicians, who prepare the estimates under security wraps which have not been breached since the early years of the century, were scheduled to begin work on the estimates early this morning, working with forecasts mailed in by state offices of the Statistical Reporting Service.

Nixon resignation defended

MONTREAL — Richard M. Nixon's Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, told the American Bar Association Sunday the former president acted "with responsibility" when he resigned although he would have preferred to let the impeachment process run to its conclusion. St. Clair avoided direct reference to Nixon throughout most of a 10-minute speech on presidential powers. But he praised both Congress and the federal courts for "acting responsibly" during the Watergate scandal. "Ultimately I would suggest to you that the President acted with responsibility in submitting his resignation when he determined he had lost the support needed to function in that office," he said.

Singer in fair condition

MISSOULA, Mont. — Hank Williams Jr., injured when he fell 300 feet while mountain climbing in western Montana, was in fair and stable condition at Missoula Community Hospital Sunday following emergency surgery. The 26-year-old country music star underwent surgery Saturday night, just hours after he slipped and fell down the mountain, west of Wisdom, Mont., near the Montana-Idaho border. Earlier Sunday, he had been listed in critical but stable condition. Williams' wife and his mother flew here Sunday morning to be with him.

Another shark attack

SAN FRANCISCO — A skin diver who was seized, shaken and tossed up out of the water by a great white shark was in satisfactory condition Sunday after a night of surgery to repair severe arm lacerations. Gilbert Brown, 34, a Daly City iron worker, said his attacker looked exactly like a great white shark he had seen caged behind bars in an underwater film of Jacques Cousteau. "However, this time there were no bars between him and me." Brown was hit while diving for abalone Saturday in muddy water 150 feet offshore at Bear Harbor, 200 miles north of San Francisco.

Ford not campaigning

FT. SMITH, Ark. — White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Sunday that although President Ford's August travel includes eight states, the visits are not related to his campaign for election next year. Nessen told reporters that Ford's campaign will not begin until next year, and that Ford had made that clear at the time he announced he would seek a full four-year term on his own. Ford said in that announcement that he would campaign vigorously, consistent with the duties of his office. Ford will be visiting these states over the next two weeks: Arkansas, Colorado, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa.

Eye kept on storms

MIAMI — Two weather disturbances crossing the Atlantic Ocean from Africa were being watched by the National Hurricane Center Sunday, but forecasters said it was unlikely that either would become Tropical Storm Caroline before Tuesday. A weak tropical wave reached from the Atlantic Ocean across Puerto Rico into the eastern Caribbean Sea. It brought rain to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, but the hurricane center forecast "no significant development" through today. The wave, lying along a north-south line, was moving westward. The center said a second disturbed weather system some 700 miles east of the Windward Islands "may become better organized during the next 24 hours."

Portuguese flex muscles

LUANDA, Angola — Portuguese fighter-jets screamed low over this seaside capital Sunday in a show of strength seen as a warning to rival black independence armies to stop fighting. In another rare show of force, Portuguese army commandoes rescued several black ministers of the provisional government from their homes, under heavy mortar attack from one of the guerrilla groups. The Portuguese Air Force's G91 Fiat jets circled Luanda repeatedly, apparently as a warning to the warring Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which holds most of the city, and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, which has encircled it.

Spacemen come home

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Apollo astronauts, delayed two weeks by poisonous rocket fumes in their spaceship, finally returned home Sunday saying their mission will lead to more cooperation between the United States and Russia.

Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton were welcomed by about 150 space agency employees, Air Force personnel and local residents.

The return to Houston, normally a grand hero's welcome with crowds in the past going well over a thousand, was anticlimactic after the pilots' news conference and meeting with President Ford in Washington Saturday.

"We had a great time up there flying that mission," Stafford said. "It was an initial effort that's going to continue as far as international cooperation is concerned."

The pilots flew to Ellington Air Force Base in Houston from Washington, the final leg home from nine days in orbit during which their Apollo was linked for nearly two days with the Soviet Soyuz.

During the final 10 minutes of the flight, potentially fatal rocket propellant fumes filled their spaceship cabin, scorching the lining of their lungs, damaging tissues and making it difficult for the last Apollo astronauts to breathe deeply. They were hospitalized for five days and spent nine more in isolation in Hawaii after their return from space July 24.

Brand, who was piloting the Apollo during reentry, did not flip two switches to shut off the rockets, allowing the fumes to enter the cabin.

7-mile brush fire contained

IDYLLWILD, Calif. (UPI) — A seven-mile long brush and timber fire that had threatened two mountain communities was contained early Sunday and expected to be fully controlled by late afternoon, the Division of Forestry reported.

The fire, which broke out Friday morning south of Lake Hemet on the south slope of Mt. San Jacinto and burned 4,500 acres, caused the evacuation of the 150 residents of Thomas Mountain Saturday.

Fire officials said the blaze was started by a juvenile playing with matches.

Residents of the town of Anza to the south were alerted to leave their homes, but no official evacuation was needed, a spokesman said. However, many residents of the north side of the town did leave their homes until the fire was near containment.

More than 1,000 firefighters remained on the lines Sunday and four helicopters were being used for water drops on the remaining hot spots. Air tankers which had been used earlier to drop chemical fire retardant remained on standby.

Area doctor not anxious to help

When she awoke, Edward had developed symptoms, and Luther, 19, was dying, asking his father to pray for him, singing a verse of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul". After his death, the nurse went outside to call for help and ask the farmers who assembled to call an undertaker.

They sent several telegrams before one would agree, and then only if they would place the body in a coffin on the horse block outside, which the father and nurse did in the drifting snow, wrapped in an American flag as Luther had requested.

Edward was weakening fast and the doctor predicted he would be dead within 48 hours.

That was when Nurse Eberwein decided she had to leave.

She had followed the doctor's orders for herself religiously "Two grains of quinine, whisky freely, gargled throat with solution of tannic acid and glycerine and kept chloride of potash tablets in my mouth constantly until the covering of my tongue was completely destroyed."

The board of health gathered across the street begged her not to leave until other nurses they had summoned arrived. Meanwhile, a doctor was summoned from Portland to relieve Dr. Shaw, who was suffering severe headaches and a sore throat. The Portland doctor arrived, took a distant look at his patients from across the room and despite her entreaties left, saying he was going to get his supper at the hotel.

At the hotel, other customers left en masse, and the doctor caught the milk train back to Portland. With Edward failing fast, the nurse let his desperate father try any of the remedies suggested by neighbors, including a poultice of onions and one of manure.

Edward begged his father to pray and asked that he be buried in his best blue suit, gave his father his ring and five dollars from his pocket-book and died with the anguished screams of his mother ringing in his ears.

After the arrival of the two other nurses, Nurse Eberwein left, walking all the way to the station because even though it was snowing hard, no carriage could be hired. She had to submit to another fumigation in burning sulphur in Dr. Shaw's office. "It almost suffocated me and inflamed my throat very much," she reported. When she got on the train, the conductor even hesitated to accept her ticket.

Toys in the attic

However, she had nothing but praise for the townsfolk. "The inhabitants of Delaware Water Gap were very kind to the afflicted family," she reports. "Everything brought to the house was placed on the horse block, the person who brought the things would whistle and then run away. The hotel proprietor sent in our meals after Edward was taken sick."

The Jeffersonian of that day also paid tribute: "Quarantined from society, their neighbors unable to aid them in caring for their sick, with children dying almost daily, their lot was a far more sad one than ever befell any other parents in this county. Whilst the malignant character of the diseases prevented friendly and sympathetic intercourse with their neighbors, yet the people of Water Gap demeaned themselves with rare charity toward the afflicted."

The newspaper also paid tribute to the borough authorities for preventing the spread of the disease. For the people of Water Gap it was a traumatic time and was long remembered. Clifford Hauser recalls his father telling him about it as a child, and warning him against playing with second-hand toys, since he felt that the germs had been carried from a case long before the toys stored in the attic and resurrected by the Andrew's children to play with.

Over the years since 1894, the old stone house came back to health and respectability and the land to farming under George T. Good who was also an elder in the Gap Presbyterian Church, where older members still recall his driving to church in his buggy.

Daily hill climb

Later, Gulick's Hill road with its sharp turns around the house and into Foxtown Hill became the site of hill climbs for the first automobile association in the area. Al Everitt has a picture of one of those hill climbs in which his father, the late A.F. Everitt, is shown.

After Good the old stone house had other tenants and other owners, emerging again into public notice when the Guy T. Young family bought and refurbished it and opened it as a tavern and restaurant in 1948. It became the fashionable place to go for elegant meals served by candlelight in restored antiquity.

after a black couple was told to leave the beach. Last week, a Puerto Rican family and a black taxi driver were hurt by objects hurled by white youths.

About 700 state and Metropolitan District Commission police kept about 2,500 blacks and an equal number of whites apart when the demonstrators arrived at the beach shortly before 2 p.m. Riot-garbed officers alternately used motorcycles, horses and their bodies to push the groups apart.

Shouts of "whitey" and "nigger" were heard shortly before scattered rocks and bottles flew from both crowds on the beach, indiscriminately landing on police and civilians.

"We don't want them (the blacks) here. This is a white community," said one young South Boston woman who refused to be identified. "Yes, I'm prejudiced. We don't go to their beaches, why do they come here? Why do they always pick on Southie?"

The blacks began moving off the beach about 3 p.m., at times being shoved by police batons. As their cars moved out of a parking area and headed down Day Avenue, small gangs of white youths would appear, pelt the vehicles with rocks, then run.

occupants fled into the Old Colony housing project pursued by a large number of whites. Mounted police moved into the project, but did not find the blacks.

Civil rights leaders organized the "picnic and swim-in" at Carson Beach, where there had been incidents for the past two Sundays. South Boston leaders set up an outdoor concert to observe "Southie Pride Day" in an effort to keep the trouble potential down.

Attorneys give no clues whether Little will testify

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Defense attorneys don't want to tip their hand on whether they will call Joan Little, a young black woman charged with slaying a white jailer, to testify at her murder trial that enters its fifth week today.

"Over the weekend we will decide whether to call Joan," defense attorney Marvin Miller said after court ended Friday. He told reporters the defense will not give advance notice if Miss Little is called.

The defense is aware of the rigorous cross examination Miss Little would face if she testifies in her own behalf. If she does testify, the prosecution would be able to call rebuttal witnesses and attempt to impugn her character.

Miss Little claims she killed Beaufort County jailer Clarence Alligood, 62, while fighting off a sexual attack. But prosecution attorneys, who have no eyewitness to the slaying, have tried to prove with 18 witnesses during eight days of testimony that she lured Alligood to her cell and then killed him as part of an escape plan.

Miss Little, 21, was awaiting appeal on a breaking and entering conviction when she escaped from the Beaufort County Jail in rural Washington, N.C. Authorities found Alligood's partially nude body in her empty cell on Aug. 27, 1974.

Even if acquitted on the murder charge, Miss Little still plans to appeal her earlier conviction, and Miller said "the legal effects and ramifications of her pending appeal on the breaking and entering" are chief considerations in whether to call her to testify.

Miller predicted the defense would be through presenting its case by Wednesday, leaving the rest of the week for rebuttal witnesses from the prosecution and closing arguments. He said the case could go to the jury by Tuesday of next week.

Defense attorneys want Mrs. C. Elliston of New York, a law enforcement specialist on sexual attack, to testify this week. Superior Court Judge Hamilton H. Hobgood has delayed a decision on allowing her to testify until he determines the "pertinence" of her testimony.

Boston civil rights leaders stage 'picnic, swim-in'

BOSTON (UPI) — Hundreds of police stood between approximately 5,000 blacks and whites Sunday when a civil rights "picnic" turned into a taunting, rock-throwing confrontation at a South Boston beach that has been the scene of racial violence during the past two weeks.

There were few serious incidents, although there were several arrests and at least two policemen were slightly injured.

An automobile containing two blacks crashed when it was stoned by young whites, and the

500 may have died in ferry boat collision

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hundreds of worried Hong Kong residents with relatives in Canton headed Sunday for Canton even though there was still no official confirmation from Peking of a reported collision one week ago of two ferry boats in south China that may have cost the lives of 500 persons.

Sketchy newspaper reports quoting travelers from Kwangtung province said more than 400 bodies have been recovered following the sinking of the two boats in Hsi Kiang (West River) between Canton and Shuihing Aug. 3.

The reports said another 100 were feared drowned in what was believed to be Canton's worst ferry disaster.

China's representative offices here — the New China News Agency and China Travel Service — said they had heard of the tragedy but neither could give any details.

This apparent unofficial confirmation was enough to send hundreds of Hong Kong residents across the border to check up on relatives in Canton. Others tried to put through telephone calls to Canton officials and the Hong Kong Immigration Department was swamped with calls.

The reports said there were some Hong Kong residents among the passengers when the two boats collided shortly after midnight Aug. 3 in a thunderstorm.

Composer Shostakovich dies in Russia at age 68

MOSCOW (UPI) — Composer Dmitry Shostakovich, whose fortunes and music rose and fell with the whims of Soviet power, died Saturday of a heart attack at the age of 68, his family announced Sunday.

First public news of his death came at the Tanglewood music festival in Massachusetts where Shostakovich's friend, cellist and conductor Mstislav Rostropovich, learned about it in a telephone call from Moscow.

The Tass news agency first announced the death in a two-line item 18 hours after it occurred but in a later expanded story called him "the outstanding Soviet composer."

Shostakovich wrote music the world admired. He also wrote Soviet propaganda pieces which Western critics panned.

"When Shostakovich is good, he is very good; and when he is poor he is awful," the late critic Milton Cross wrote.

Some of his most admired music brought Shostakovich into conflict with the Communist state. After every such crisis, he trimmed his sails, wrote an "approved" opus and restored himself to favor.

His 1932 opera "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk" enjoyed enormous success for two years until dictator Josef Stalin saw it and Pravda killed it by calling it "crude, primitive and vulgar." The revised version, "Katerina Izmailova," has been restored to the Bolshoi Theater repertory.

Shostakovich redeemed himself by writing his simple fifth symphony which became known as "The Symphony of Sorrow."

West End wanderings

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

BRODHEADSVILLE — The big late breaking story of the week in the West End is the sudden resignation of four of Blue Ridge Fire Company's top officers and the re-election of former chief George Kitchen.

Jim Eckley, the new chief elected in June, is said to have resigned for personal reasons. Three other of his top officers followed suit.

Along with Kitchen, Bob Henesy will serve as assistant chief and the newly elected captain is Ron Shoemaker. The two lieutenants in the company, Pete Goss covering Snydersville, and Sherwood Clapper covering Saylorburg, remained in office. The newly elected engineer was Randy McCabe.

According to Chief Kitchen, the fire company will be responding to all calls the same as in the past.

Big news flash — Dr. John Martucci and his wife Irene have not been killed in an automobile accident. That's one of the big rumors floating around Brodheadsville these days, but it is unfounded. Dr. Martucci confirmed this week that he and his wife were involved in an automobile accident at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday on Union Blvd. near Airport Rd. in Allentown when they were hit from behind by a station wagon. Both he and his wife were taken to Allentown Sacred Heart hospital and were treated and released. They both are suffering from whip lash and neck sprain and are still undergoing some follow-up tests, but Dr. Martucci is expected to be back in the office next week. The office of Family Practice Associates is being covered this week by the other two doctors on the staff.

West End weather these days has been breaking all kind of records according to Effort resident Harry Kunkle, who has been keeping rainfall and temperature records here for years. Aside from the heatwave records broken last week, Kunkle says we have received 30 inches of rain so far this year in the West End, with more than 15 inches, alone, being recorded this summer. Kunkle says eight inches fell in June, five inches in July and two and a quarter inches so far this month.

Have you ever heard of Lost Road in Polk Township? You may soon. In a joke, the Polk Township supervisors said they might name one of their thoroughfares Lost Road because it is always being deleted from road maps and nobody can ever find it.

That final plan for the Weir Mountain Estates, which contains 41 lots was submitted to the Eldred Township supervisors this week for final approval, but word is that there hasn't been any action on the plan yet.

The Kunkletown Volunteer Fire Company might be in for a big chunk of the revenue sharing money received by Eldred Township this month if the municipality's solicitor decides this week that it is legal for the fire company to purchase the radio equipment that will link them up with the Monroe County Control Center alarm system. If installed, the system will alert all firemen right in their homes or automobiles in the event of a fire and many of the men will be able to go directly to the fire. The alarm at the firehouse will be activated automatically from the control center in Stroudsburg.

Potatoes may be in for big trouble from blight because of all the summer rain in Northampton County, but in the West End, Potato King Bill Baumgartner says the potatoes are doing fine. Although the farmers here have been spraying every week against the blight since the wet weather, they don't expect any major crop damage because of the rain.

And speaking of local farmers, if you think they have gotten in on any huge profits because of the latest wheat deal with Russia, you're wrong. Baumgartner says he is only getting $3.27 a bushel for wheat now, and the price is a dollar less than the farmers received last year. When you take away the extra costs of raising wheat, that translates down to about only $2.50 per bushel for the farmer.

News flash — The state has recently ruled that errors and omissions insurance is now legal for local municipalities, so look for local actions authorizing the new coverage.

Local Hamilton Township artist Peter Cohen has donated a water color of the Old Mill to the municipality, and an inside source tells us it will be displayed publicly at the new Restoration Committee meeting at 7 p.m., Aug. 19, at the Old Mill. The picture will be framed, according to Gloria Bonser, committee chairman, and hung in prominent public view for all township residents to enjoy.

And we also understand that the Sciota Minutemen will be presenting a 13-star flag to the Old Mill officially at the meeting, which will feature for the public and committee members, slides of other restored mills in the United States. They have been prepared by Jay Schweitzer. You're invited to attend if you're interested.

If you're hesitating attending that great annual chicken barbeque this year out at the Effort United Methodist Church — don't. This year all the barbecuing will be done on electric stoves in a special trailer, so even if there's a major downpour, the food will be ready on time and the Aug. 16 meal will still be a delight. Last year a downpour nearly wiped out the open pit barbeque, but this year, the church has changed the cooking arrangements to make sure Mother Nature can't spoil the barbeque.

That time of the year is rolling around folks, when you have so much squash you don't know what to do with it. Here's a local recipe courtesy of Quiet Valley Farm. I haven't tasted the dish personally, but knowing the reputation of the Quiet Valley cooks, it's bound to be a good one. Wash and slice three summer or zucchini squash, add one large diced onion and cook until tender. Drain and mash. Salt to taste. Grate a good sized piece of cheese and beat the whites and yolks of four eggs separately, add one tablespoon of butter and mix with the squash. Put in a buttered casserole and bake at 350 degrees for three-quarters of an hour. The eggs can be beaten together if you want a different texture for the dish.

And speaking of Quiet Valley, we understand a new parking lot is being installed for visitors in time for the big Harvest Festival scheduled for Oct. 11 and Oct. 12, so be sure to put the event on your calendar.

Pocono Township accepted for Federal flood insurance

TANNERSVILLE — Pocono Township has been accepted in the National Flood Insurance Program, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Property owners can now purchase flood insurance at federally-subsidized rates under the 1973 Flood Disaster Protection Act.

Township supervisors voted to apply for the program at the June 3 meeting after solicitor Delleff Hansen said they couldn't get future federal grants without the program.

HUD acting flood insurance administrator J. Robert Hunter said owners in flood-prone areas must have the insurance to be eligible for most federal loans.

"The law requires that it must be purchased by owners of property in areas identified as flood-prone by HUD, in order to be eligible for virtually all forms of federal or federally-related financial assistance for building purposes in those areas," he said.

The limit of insurance for single family homes is $35,000 while the limit for non-residential buildings is $100,000.

The cost to a home owner is 25 cents for every $100 of coverage and to non-residential building owners is 40 cents for each $100 coverage.

Contents of homes can be insured up to $10,000 at a cost of 35 cents for $100 coverage, while non-residential contents can be insured up to $100,000 for 75 cents for every $100 coverage.

Hunter said the insurance is effective immediately for Pocono Township residents during the first 30 days after it became effective July 29.

After the first 30 days, applicants will have to wait 15 days, he said.

The General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp., Ltd., of 414 Walnut St., Philadelphia, has been designated as the flood insurance service company for Pocono Township.

Wayne County to sign Bicentennial sites

HONESDALE — The Wayne County Bicentennial Committee has begun painting historical site markers which will be erected this fall or next spring.

The markers will designate 50 centennial and 50 historical places in the county.

The program is attempting to identify both buildings and sites which have some significance in Wayne County's heritage.

In other projects, the calendar committee has been displaying calendars at various locations around the county.

The archives committee has been assembling information to provide a bibliography of historical materials on the county's heritage.

A Wayne County Bicentennial Association has been established to raise funds for activities in 1976. Memberships are being sold for a dollar.

Memberships can be obtained by writing to the Wayne County Bicentennial Association, P.O. Box 566, Honesdale, Pa. 18431.

Bicentennial committees have already been established in Hawley, Waymart and Bethany.

Information about establishing other committees can be obtained from the County Bicentennial Committee, Box 566, Honesdale, Pa. 18431 or by calling 253-4700.

Board to consider proposal Aug. 25

Review set for Slate Belt hospital

ALLENTOWN — Two proposals, one for construction of a 30-bed skilled nursing facility to meet the specific needs of the handicapped and mentally retarded, the other for construction of a 65-bed hospital in Pen Argyl, will be considered by the Project Review Committee of the Eastern Pennsylvania Comprehensive Health Planning Board Thursday.

The committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Lehigh Valley Club, Allentown. Its recommendations will be presented to the full comprehensive health planning board on Monday, August 25.

Board members represent Berks, Carbon, Lehigh, Monroe, Northampton and Schuylkill Counties.

Slate Belt Municipalities Association, project sponsor, is proposing construction of the 65-bed hospital in Pen Argyl.

Medical services to be provided by the proposed facility include emergency room, surgery, medical-surgical cardiac care beds, outpatient clinic and ancillary services.

Construction would be financed by a nearly $5.4 million tax free bond issue. It would also pay for equipment and interim financing.

The Pen Argyl project and a proposal for a skilled nursing facility for meeting the needs of handicapped and mentally retarded persons in Schuylkill Haven, were reviewed in June by the project review committee.

After that meeting the committee asked the Slate Belt Hospital to consider the alternative of an emergency room-primary care facility, supported by the Easton Hospital.

The Schuylkill Haven proposal, the first of its kind proposed in the six-county health planning area, would be termed the Developmental Maximization Unit. It has been successfully used in other areas to rehabilitate persons and returning them to their homes. It would cost an estimated $2.7 million.

Comments on either proposal may be made at the committee meeting Thursday or by contacting Peter Whittier, executive director at 59 Brookside Rd., Wescosville.

Health screening scheduled

STROUDSBURG — State health officials have announced their next, free, multiphasic health screening program will be conducted on Wednesday, August 27th at the Stroudsburg State Health Center, 519 Sarah Street.

The program, which is available to all residents of Monroe County over 21 years of age, will be administered throughout the day by a team of professionals from the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

An urinalysis and series of blood chemistry tests will be administered to check for such disorders as anemia, diabetes, cholesterol, hypertension and certain kidney and liver disorders. Results of the tests will be provided at the site and each individual will receive counseling in specific areas of their health.

All individuals showing evidence of detected abnormalities will be referred to their private physician for diagnosis and follow-up treatment.

Since the program is scheduled on an appointment basis, interested individuals must contact the Stroudsburg State Health Center at 424-3020 to schedule a free appointment.

Pa. farmers double land conservation

STROUDSBURG — The number of Pennsylvania farmers developing conservation plans for their land doubled in the past year.

According to the annual report of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS), the state's land users prepared 2,900 conservation plans in fiscal year 1975, compared to 1,473 plans in 1974. Requests for SCS assistance increased sharply this year as Pennsylvania farmers strive to meet the requirements of the state's Erosion and Sediment Control Law.

Increased demand also came from farmers with conservation plans which needed revising due to changes in land use or farm enterprises. This past year, 700 farmers revised their conservation plans compared to 225 the previous year.

According to the U.S. Soil Conservation Service State Conservationist Benny Martin, SCS district conservationists are being asked to further increase their planning aid to farmers in 1976 to meet the additional demand. Martin said conservation practices installed to control soil erosion and reduce sedimentation should increase substantially, too.

All freedoms worth keeping

FBI director Clarence Kelley's prescription for a more secure nation leaves a little bit to be desired: he would have us give up a little bit of our freedom in order to guarantee the preservation of the rest of them.

Sounds good on paper. So does the old cliché, "If you have nothing to hide, you have nothing to fear from close inspection."

What that approach ignores is that individual freedoms can be violated as easily by good intentions as bad. Is there really that much difference between the FBI snooping in on telephone conversations at will in order to nab criminals or foreign agents, or the Soviet secret police monitoring the conversations and activities of those who disagree with official policy?

Kelley seems to think so. In his view, the FBI cannot carry out its function of dealing with subversives or organized crime unless it can violate the privacy of anyone who appears to be in league with either of these elements.

All right, there are laws on the books that allow such snooping. But they are designed to protect the privacy of the individual and so require that a judge be given convincing proof that the person under observation indeed may be engaged in criminal or subversive activities. Not that he is so involved — that would be tantamount to conviction and eaves-dropping would be unnecessary — but what lawyers call "probable cause" to think that he is.

Officials in charge of making things work smoothly often think in terms of "giving up a little bit of freedom" in order to level their paths. Every time the people give up their little bits of freedom to do that, they suffer, for one slice of freedom leads to another as the night follows the day.

The classic case is pre-World War II Italy, when Benito Mussolini indeed made the trains run on time. But what a sacrifice the Italian people made for the sake of commuters' convenience!

Albert Jenner, former minority counsel to the House Judiciary Committee that considered Richard Nixon's impeachment articles, quite properly rebutted Kelley's comment. "This," he said, "was the philosophy of Watergate, the coverup and abuses of powers..."

With the CIA in disrepute and forced out in the open, there is no question that the FBI has been put on its mettle to counter the surging Soviet espionage here. But we must not cave in to calls of crisis and surrender more of our freedoms. For if we do, what does it matter what system we live under, if both are equally repressive and disdainful of the concept of individual freedom that has made our nation unique in the history of world government?

No-fault: Positively

If you haven't called the state Insurance Department Hot Line with your no-fault questions yet, forget it. The lines are busy with panicky Pennsylvanians.

The main thing to worry about right now is whether you have the coverage required by law — personal injury protection, bodily injury liability, and property damage liability. You can be arrested for failing to carry that insurance.

If you already have auto insurance, your company automatically converted you to the legal requirements: don't worry about it.

As for money-saving options, some insurance companies continue to obfuscate the complicated questions and recommend staying away from them for the obvious reason that they cost them money.

It would be hard to find a better example of an industry being dragged kicking and screaming into participation in a new, improved program.

They know who they are, they know what they're doing, and they ought to be ashamed of themselves.

On the other hand, the individual's own laxity is partly to blame if he is continuing to throw a couple dollars away by carrying the double coverage of his own hospitalization, his own sick leave, and the no-fault provisions in the same areas.

But, if it's any consolation, if you are injured in an auto accident, you will be paid by both (the infamous double dip). So, you may as well think positive and anticipate making money on your accident rather than losing money on your premium.

"And you want something that will strengthen your will power?" asked the doctor.

"Well, no," said the fellow. "I was thinking of something that would weaken my conscience."

Constitution written for benefit of upper middle class

Nicholas Von Hoffman

was devised as a means of protecting land speculators, bankers, manufacturers, shippers and slave owners from the politics and tendencies of the new country's majority of small farmers.

Class interests

Beard argued that the American Constitution simply doesn't make sense unless it is understood that the document was written by representatives of a minority class of white men who not only stood to gain financially from the new government but were being overwhelmed by the increasingly democratic forces coming to power in the state governments. Our Constitution, then, can be looked at as another example of the minority rich trying to fend off the majority poor who were pressing for paper money and refusing to be taxed to pay off the government securities that the writers of the Constitution or their class owned.

When Beard propounded this interpretation, he was accused of being a Marxist. He replied that the notion that economics underlies and forms political structure is as old as Aristotle. It certainly wasn't news to late 18th century Americans. It was what James Madison, the "master builder" of the Constitution, believed (No. 10 in "The Federalist"):

"From the protection of different and unequal faculties of acquiring property, the possession of Different degrees and kinds of property immediately results; and from the influence of these on the sentiments and views of the respective proprietors, ensues a division of society into different interests and parties . . . The regulation of these various and interfering interests forms the principal task of modern legislation, and involves the spirit of party and faction in the necessary and ordinary operations of the government."

The party or faction most in need of regulating were the poor folks, as this snippet out of a letter to Madison from fellow FF Rufus King makes clear enough: "Apprehension that the liberties of the people are in danger and a distrust of men of property have a more powerful effect upon the mind of our opponents than any specific objections against the Constitution . . . The opposition complains that the lawyers, judges, clergymen, merchants and men of education are all in favor of the Constitution."

Common catpaws

If that sounds familiar, so will the remedy for upper-class defense against the majority. Make a Constitution by which "Society itself will be broken up into so many parts, interests and classes of citizens that the rights of individuals, or of the minority, will be in little danger from interested combinations of the majority" (No. 51, "The Federalist"). The same tactics are still in use. The effect of the new election campaign reform law, sponsored by John Gardner and the other corporate catpaws of Common Cause, is to break up potential majorities before they form.

Sometimes "interested combinations of the majority" have formed and broken through anyway, as when the Jacksonians figured out how to restore the power to print paper money to the states in plain defiance of the Constitution. The fallback position against such ram-paging majorities who do manage to get themselves organized is an institutionally unresponsive government. "The injury which may possibly be done by defeating a few good laws," said Alexander Hamilton, "will be amply compensated by the advantage of preventing a number of bad ones."

It is that reasoning which explains why our Constitution is a booby-trapped obstacle course built to slow down, dissipate and break up angry majorities. Step back and look at it as Beard did and as it was written. Not only do you have a bicameral legislature, a divisive and dilatory mechanism, but no officers of the Federal government are chosen in the same way by the same people for the same length of service. Representatives are directly elected for two years, a third of the Senate is chosen biennially for six-year terms by the state legislatures; an electoral college picks the President who serves a four-year term, while the President chooses the judges of the Supreme Court who enjoy life-time terms.

This is why, of course, landslide election victories and mandates from the people take so long to translate themselves into such tepid and temporizing governmental actions. It is why Rifkin's corporate power is so hard to break up. Our revered Founding Fathers built the system not to work that way.

Washington focus

The elusive Teddy Kennedy — Democratic Party leaders are at the point of abandoning all hope that they can get Sen. Kennedy to accept the 1976 presidential nomination. Recently he has given clear signals that he wants out — definitely.

Their theory is that only Kennedy could unite the party for a very tough race. They can't quite believe that, having said no, he means no, not yes or maybe.

The race for Democratic nomination is shapeless — The party professionals see nothing but dark horses, tending to lead the party in opposite directions. The view is gaining that in the end they will have to settle on one of the old familiars who has been around the course before — either Sen. Hubert Humphrey or Sen. Edmund Muskie.

What I hear is that if Hubert should be the one he would like to have Kennedy as his running mate! Would he do it? The Chappaquiddick matter would be muted and Teddy would not have to feel he was risking his life. It could be seen as preparation for the future without undue exposure in the present.

Rocky is not amused — Though unruffled on the surface by the recent thrusts of "Bo" Callaway, President Ford's campaign manager, that the Republican ticket would be strengthened by Nelson Rockefeller's absence, the Vice President has political resources to fight back.

He may not need to. Reason: The President has assured him that the White House is putting a stop to it, blaming Callaway for careless freewheeling.

The Ford-Rockefeller relationship — It's cordial, relaxed, no rough edges. Rocky expects to be Ford's running mate. Ford wants him as his running mate and is planning to say so at the time of the national convention, which is most unlikely to turn him down.

The political evolution of black Africa — After a decade and a half of independence, military dictatorship rules across the whole face of black Africa today. It is evident that the black nations have won their freedom from outside rule but have not won the freedom to govern themselves. Political repression, military coups and one-party states have wiped out all semblance of black self-government. They are governed by those who can seize power, such as in oil-rich Nigeria last week.

This sheds some light on why the Third World nations are usually found speaking sweetly about the Soviet Union and sourly about the United States. They are not pro-Communist; they are pro-dictatorship and don't want any good word said about democracy lest it undermine their own dictatorships.

A Watergate non-reform — The two chief special Watergate prosecutors are at one in urging Congress not to create a permanent prosecutor above both the President and the Justice Department. They point out that such a post would be divisive and accountable to nobody. It was always an empty reform because the Ervin committee thoughtfully gave it jurisdiction over offenses in the Executive Branch and denied it jurisdiction over congressional offenses.

'Buddy system' sinking Postal Service into red ink

Jack Anderson
With Les Whitten

deal was blocked, therefore, by Senior Asst. Postmaster General Murray Comarow, who refused to bypass the bidding process.

When Comarow cited government regulations, Bailer protested: "What is this government crap? When the top man wants something done, you do it."

Klassen and Bailer were obliged to look around for a new contract for Sqwat. They decided there was an "urgent need" for plastic covers to keep the letters on postal trays from becoming soiled. This time they didn't bother to solicit bids; they simply awarded the $870,000 contract, willy nilly, so Sqwat.

The postal procurement section was ordered to work out the details of the deal. States one memo: "I understand that a telephone call from Mr. Hollingsworth to Mr. Klassen caused this flurry of action."

There were rumblings from the postal technicians. "There is an excessive amount of promotion flavor to the deal," objected purchasing chief Edwin R. Ilnyre.

Procurement chief Conrad Trahern echoed: "I have signed off, both of us knowing that this is not a good procurement but were ordered to do it over our objections."

The technicians also found, according to the suppressed documents, that the company had "uncertain finances" and had "no in-house capability for producing the item."

The quality assurance chief, John J. Mark, put it bluntly: "In my opinion, Sqwat Corporation does not currently have the technical capability and capacity to manufacture plastic Letter Mail Tray Covers."

In a letter to the company, the purchasing chief questioned "the management ability of your firm, particularly the ability of your firm to manage a contract for 500,000 units of an injection-molded product which has never before been produced."

Despite all the adverse reports, Klassen and Bailer pushed the contract through. Then, Hollingsworth, still not satisfied, asked for a price increase. This was too much even for his postal pals and the project fizzled.

Hollingsworth demanded an $84,950 settlement and finally got $24,020. In return, the taxpayers got the unused molds for the controversial tray covers.

Footnote: Hollingsworth told us he received "no special consideration" from his friend Klassen and swore he lost $125,000 on the deal. He said the Postal Service technicians were insensitive to the problems of a small, minority-owned business, and treated him unfairly. The cost increase request was necessary, he said, because of higher petrochemical costs.

A Postal Service spokesman said Klassen "expressed interest" in Hollingsworth because the project had "merit" and because he wished to "encourage minority-owned firms."

Postmaster General Bailer does not recall the remark about "government crap," added the spokesman.

enough to offset any apparent annual rise in the cost of living.

Again, to illustrate, over-all transportation costs have been climbing steadily — but among the real "villains" behind this inflation have been soaring parking charges and public transportation costs. You can't do much but you can do some things to save on public transportation costs — and you can do plenty to curb your parking charges.

You can switch forms of entertainment for activities which are going out of sight. You certainly can save on cigarettes by quitting smoking. You have a wide variety of choices in clothing. I could go on and on but there is no need.

With the basic guidance given here, you can use your own imagination and carry on superbly from here.

Quiz yourself into buying wisely

When you're wondering whether you should or should not buy, give yourself this quiz, prepared by the Council for Family Financial Education, and find out.

1. Do you really need this item? . . . Yes No
  2. Is the price reasonable? . . . . . Yes No
  3. Is this the best time to buy the item? . . . . . Yes No
  4. If this is a bargain, is it a current model (if that matters to you)? . . . Yes No
  5. If "on sale," is the price a true sale price? . . . . . Yes No
  6. Are you sure no less expensive item can be substituted? . . . . . Yes No
  7. Are you sure there are no major disadvantages? . . . . . Yes No
  8. If excessive in price, will it truly satisfy an inner need? (If not excessive, just check "yes.") . . . . . Yes No
  9. Have you checked and researched the item? . . . . . Yes No
  10. Do you know the retailer's reputation? . . . . . Yes No
  11. Does this retailer offer any special services with the item? . . . . . Yes No
- Score your answers as follows: 9-11 yesses — buy the product; 6-8 yesses — think again; fewer than 6 yesses — forget it.

Hot dog diets

Shaving calories a picnic

By BARBARA GIBBONS

What's the price of a hot dog 'n' beer?

If you're weight-wary, the calorie costs may concern you even more than cash: Your scale doesn't give any points for champagne tastes or beer budgets! As calories go, hot dogs and beer can be pretty expensive... close to 500 calories for one wienie on a roll with relish, mustard and a beer chaser! On the other hand, a Slim Gourmet "hot-dog lover" can duplicate the same lunch for fewer than 300 calories.

How? Let's compare the hot-dog lunches of two should-be dieters, Jack and Jill. By being calorie-wise, Jill manages to save one-third the calories without cutting quantities.

hot dog, 1.6 oz. ....	140	110
roll (1) .....	105	62

relish, 1 tbs. ....	28	3
mustard, 2 tsp. ....	12	12
beer, 12 oz. ....	150	99
Total Calories .....	435	286

Here's how Jill cut calories without cutting out:

HOT DOGS — Jill is a careful label-reader. She won't buy any brand that doesn't list nutritional data on the package. By being a "calorie comparison shopper," she's found that competing brands can vary by as much as 50 calories per hot dog, even though the wieners weigh the same. She's also learned that premium-priced all-beef and all-meat franks are frequently more fattening (more fat, less valuable protein) than the so-called "inferior" hot dogs with cereal or skim milk fillers.

Jill never fries hot dogs in fat. Instead of adding calories, she subtracts them by broiling or barbecuing on a rack. But first she makes shallow diagonal slits in the franks to let the melting fat escape.

HOT-DOG ROLLS — Most are one ¼ ounces and contain about 105 calories. Jill subtracts 43 calories' worth of soggy dough by toasting her rolls, unopened. Then she pulls out the breadly middle, leaving only the tasty, crispy shell.

RELISH AND MUSTARD — Sweet relish is 25 to 35 calories a tablespoon, depending on the sugar content. Sour or dill relish contains little or no sugar and is only three calories per tablespoon. (Make sour relish sweet — without sugar calories — by stirring in some no-calorie sweetener!) Most brands and types of mustard are about the same calorie counts.

BEER — Both ordinary and premium beers are about 150 calories per 12-ounce can or bottle. Jill saves 50 calories by choosing one of the low-calorie, low-carbohydrate beers now available in many areas (Gabliger or Lite, for example).

They have the same alcoholic content but 50 fewer calories per bottle. She can have even more by choosing one of the low alcohol "near-beer" products, only 60 or so calories per bottle.

FRANKS OF THE FUTURE — In some areas, "chicken franks" are now being test-marketed. This new product, made with chicken meat, looks, cooks and tastes like ordinary franks, but the calorie count is slightly less because of the lower fat content. Good news for calorie and cholesterol-watchers!

(Lemon Ice at only 40 calories per serving; chocolate ice cream at only 80 calories. Five-calorie strawberry sauce: For these and more recipes, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to SLIM GOURMET FROZEN DESSERTS, in care of The Pocono Record, Sparta, N.J. 07871.)

Dessert hint

Homemade ice cream made with cocoa is richer in flavor than ice cream made with chocolate. But the richness of cocoa butter, which represents 50 per cent of the chocolate, provides smoothness that cocoa powder does not.

was about $150, Kamer said. Today the cost runs about $350.

Performing such operations in offices eliminates this cost, he said, and frees hospital beds for more seriously ill persons. He said patient interest was increasing in office surgery because of the lower cost and the lack of health insurance coverage for "purely esthetic surgery."

Kamer, an assistant professor of otolaryngology at UCLA Medical School, emphasized the office operating unit must be well equipped and that quality control procedures be observed. "A modern office surgical facility must be as clean as a hospital and as completely equipped," he said.

Publisher's Notebook

Delinquent neighbors

By ALAN GOULD JR.

A continuing local news story for the past several weeks has been delinquent tax payments culminating in the annual "tax sale" by the county.

Property on which the taxes are unpaid for two years is put on the block each August. Few are sold. Often this is because the other liabilities combined with the taxes due represent more than the property is worth. More often, however, the taxes are unpaid because the owner had something else to do with his money. It is understood that he will eventually pay, thus it is an exercise in frustration to bother to bid.

The penalty on unpaid taxes amounts to an old fashioned six per cent a year. Money is hardly available at that rate today. Inflation alone has gobbled it up so that paying 1973 taxes with 1975 dollars is no worse than a standoff even at six per cent.

The most news space has gone to Howard Johnson's in Water Gap (or is it Smithfield Township) partly because of its peculiar situation. Which municipality and which school district should get how much of a tax based on assessment which is also disputed?

The most space in the legal ad that the treasurer runs to inform the delinquents and the rest of us where he's short in collections went to Recra Del Corp. and friends in Coolbaugh Township.

Anyone who pays county taxes and especially those in the Pocono Mountain School District and Coolbaugh should be perturbed with Recra Del (which has the Pocono Farms property), Pocono Carriage Estates and Smoke Ridge. These are operations guided by John MacGregor and Pat Faiz.

Public hearings scheduled on legal gambling for Pa.

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A seven-member subcommittee of the Pennsylvania House will begin public hearings this week to discuss the pros and cons of legalized gambling as a means of raising revenue.

In its initial stages, the House inquiry will focus on the Pennsylvania lottery, which has drawn both praise and criticism since its inception in 1972.

Rep. Joseph Rhodes Jr., D-Allegheny, vice chairman of the tax-writing House Finance Committee, will head the probe, Rhodes will open the hearings Thursday.

The second-term legislator said the subcommittee plans to call lottery officials, law enforcement authorities, citizen groups and others. Rhodes estimated the probe will continue for several months.

"There have been many questions raised about the lottery," Rhodes said, "such as whether it has had the impact on the numbers racket it was supposed to have.

"Or, whether the proliferation of new lottery games has proved so confusing as to be counter-productive, or whether the lottery will continue to remain financially stable."

Last year, pari-mutuel wagering at horse tracks netted $25 million in state revenues. The lottery surpassed that figure, producing over $50 million in the fiscal year ended June 30.

But Rhodes said his subcommittee is interested in more than simply determining if gambling is a dependable revenue-raiser.

governor recommended for us contained just enough money to carry our last year's effort forward with no new positions, no new programs and no improvements in operations," Goddard said.

Legislation pending before the House would provide the additional funds which Goddard believes are necessary.

"If we do not receive the additional money in the fall and actually must live with a $6.7 million shortage, the only option left to us will be to eliminate whole programs which can be absorbed by others," he said.

Goddard said the deep mine safety inspection and air quality management programs

Former POW's ex-wife must account for money

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — An Allegheny County Common Pleas Court judge has ordered the former wife of an Air Force pilot who spent 5½ years in a North Vietnam prison camp to account for more than $80,000 of his salary and allotments she received during his captivity.

Judge Maurice Louik made the ruling in the case of LaVerne Myers Crawford of Sharpsville, Mercer County, who remarried after her divorce from Glenn L. Myers in November, 1973.

Saturday was the eighth anniversary of Myers' capture by the North Vietnamese after his jet was shot down on a photoreconnaissance mission.

After Myers' release from the North Vietnamese prison camp, he telephoned his wife from the Philippine Islands. She told him then that she wanted a divorce.

Myers filed the divorce suit Aug. 1, 1973, his ninth wedding anniversary. On Aug. 16, 1973, after his wife reportedly refused to disclose her use of his salary and allotments, Myers filed suit against LaVerne to find out what became of the money.

The judge said the court's ultimate finding as to whether Myers is entitled to any of the monies spent by his wife while he was a POW "can only be made after she makes an account of such sums."

Her reason for refusing Myers' questions apparently was a general power of attorney form Myers signed before reporting to his assignment in South Vietnam in January, 1967, a month before their son, Glenn, now 8, was born.

Judge Louis said, "Solely because (she) had an absolute right, as attorney in fact, to negotiate her husband's interests does not mean such a power was unqualified."

Antique heist arrests expected

WARREN, Pa. (UPI) — Police said more arrests are expected in connection with the theft of more than a half-million dollars worth of antiques from the Warren County Historical Society during the past year.

The arrests of two teenaged members of the society in the thefts was revealed Saturday.

Mark Matson, 18, Warren, was released under $3,000 bond. The other unidentified youth was remanded to the custody of juvenile authorities.

If convicted, the pair faced maximum penalties of seven-year prison terms and $10,000 fines.

Several of the stolen items were recovered last week from the Allegheny River near here.

Interest in shale revived

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ten-dollar oil has done what $3 oil did not — it has made shale reserves attractive again to some companies.

President Ford will demonstrate his interest in development of shale oil with a visit later in August to a shale processing effort near Rifle, Colo.

Back when oil sold for $3 or so a barrel, suggestions that companies lease federal land for development of shale oil got no response.

Now that oil is averaging around $10 and may go higher, federal lease sales for land in Colorado and Utah have drawn bids totaling $447.5 million and some people are saying the shale process can compete with crude oil in price.

Meeting environmental requirements may be another matter. Shattering and heating shale rock to turn its tarlike material into oil involves problems of disposal of the waste, transport of the material, processing, and other questions.

The work near Rifle is the tryout of a process by a long list of companies calling themselves the Paraho Development Corp. Several other groups and individual firms have shale plans or processes.

Charles H. Brown, senior vice president of The Oil Shale Corp., said in an interview that "the President is doing a great thing in focusing national attention on shale oil. How big a contribution it makes and how soon depend on the capital."

He said it would take $1 billion to build and operate a plant turning out 50,000 barrels a day of oil from shale. But he said if oil stays at $10 or more a barrel, the cost would be worth it because the reserves are huge.

They are estimated variously at hundreds of billions of barrels of oil.

TOSCO and the other companies in the Colony group — Ashland, Shell, and Atlantic Richfield — bid $117 million for some Colorado acreage and their lease proposal is now in the environmental study stage.

Like the other three areas that have drawn bids so far, the land is in the Green River Formation that sprawls across parts of Colorado and Utah and is said to contain most of the richest shale.

would be the first to be eliminated since both can be partially taken up by federal programs.

Federal inspectors could function in place of state mine safety inspectors and the air quality program could be preempted by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, Goddard said.

The DER has already furloughed 48 employees, including 24 Bureau of Forestry Employees and 12 of the field staff of the Office of Resources Management.

System trying to overcome problems

Social Security turns 40

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Growing as it ages and struggling to make ends meet, the durable social security system turns 40 on Thursday.

Plagued now by looming financial problems and beset by such new administrative burdens as the introduction of Medicare in the 1960s, social security probably has as much impact on the life of every American as any government program, and far more than most.

"We can never insure 100 per cent of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life," President Franklin D. Roosevelt said when he signed the Social Security Act into law on Aug. 14, 1935.

"But we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-stricken old age."

When the first 3,682 social security checks were sent out in Jan., 1940, the combined monthly benefits totaled $75,844.

Now, some 31 million men, women and children receive monthly checks worth $4.9 billion in old age, survivors and disability benefits.

A total of $62.3 billion in benefit payments is predicted for the current year.

Nearly 100 million persons will work in social security-covered employment or self-employment during 1975.

About 50 of the original recipients are still alive and receiving benefits.

The first check is said to have gone to an Ida Fuller who, according to a niece, invested about $22 of it and received more than $20,000 over a 35-year period before she died at age 100.

A government history of the social security system calls it the most durable product of Roosevelt's New Deal. The term "social security" was an American invention, brought into national and then international use by the authors of the legislation.

In many other nations, social security now includes some form of national health insurance, not just for the elderly but for the entire population.

At 40, social security faces financial problems caused in part by heavy unemployment.

When the system was created in 1935, 11 million workers were unemployed.

Inflation and unemployment now are devouring the system's emergency reserves at a rate that will deplete them — unless new sources of funding are provided — sometime after 1980, the administration has told Congress in various reports on the system.

Higher inflation means greater benefits for recipients, and higher unemployment means a smaller annual income to the system.

May abandon two programs

DER slashes budget

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania Secretary of Environmental Resources Maurice K. Goddard says two state environmental programs will have to be abandoned unless a $6.7 million dollar cut in the department's budget is at least partially restored.

Goddard said he has directed his staff to immediately slash an estimated $3 million from the Department of Environmental Resources operating budget.

Second-level cuts, including elimination of the deep mine safety inspection and air quality management programs, will be needed if an additional $3.8 million is not appropriated for DER.

"The budget which the governor recommended for us contained just enough money to carry our last year's effort forward with no new positions, no new programs and no improvements in operations," Goddard said.

Legislation pending before the House would provide the additional funds which Goddard believes are necessary.

"If we do not receive the additional money in the fall and actually must live with a $6.7 million shortage, the only option left to us will be to eliminate whole programs which can be absorbed by others," he said.

Goddard said the deep mine safety inspection and air quality management programs

Hong Kong cracking down on 'unfunny' books

HONG KONG (UPI) — Intrigued children stand fingering through stacks of comic books, but it isn't the antics of Donald Duck or Mickey Mouse that captures their attention. They contain scenes of torture, sex, rape, and murder by every imaginable method. Boys and girls too young to even read the Chinese text save their allowances to buy the 16 cent comics filled with violence and perversion. These kinds of comic books have enraged Hong Kong parents for years, even though their readers include thousands of adults. Public officials also were appalled by the comics that glorify criminals and ridicule police. Now the government of the British Crown Colony has decided to crack down with a tough new "Objectionable Publications" bill. The proposal would boost fines for publishing "objectionable" material from a maximum of $1,000 to $20,000 and would raise the maximum jail term from six months to three years. Printing equipment would be confiscated. Parents' groups at first liked the bill, but on closer examination it was found that it could be used to censor all publications and not just comic books. The executive committee of the Hong Kong Journalists Association called the proposed law "an attempt to harass the media." Besieged by angry parents demanding the end of smutty comics, and by journalists warning that the bill would "hinder the operation of the serious media," the government had little option but considerable revision.

After passage on two readings by the colony's Legislative Council, Attorney General John Hobbie announced amendments to allay fears the bill would apply to newspapers or muzzle freedom of speech. He said the bill was only aimed at picture publications directed at those under 16.

Threat to their livelihood. They said they would be afraid to print anything if the government doesn't give them clear guidelines. Stephen Ho, the Chief Liaison Officer for the Home Affairs Department, which would be largely responsible for enforcing the law, said that a concentrated effort to provide alternative literature and entertaining reading material for children is one of the most important factors in improving the situation. "No such offensive comic books were available here when I was a boy," Ho said. He said comic book publishers agreed with him on the need for printing material that would have a healthier influence on children, but they were insisting they needed a more specific law to guide them.

A special committee of representatives from many organizations is appealing to the publishers to produce more suitable reading material. Prizes have been suggested to encourage creative writing for children. City district officers have been out in the streets in a massive drive to inform vendors of the provisions of the new obscenity bill, and a group of school teachers has vowed to form smut-hunting teams to search out obscene publications and report them to the police.

Some publishers have indicated their willingness to start printing classic comics, such as "Swiss Family Robinson," "Gulliver's Travels" and "A Tale of Two Cities." Although there are signs that the amount of comic book smut is decreasing because of the publicity campaign, no one is under the delusion that there will be a sizeable reversal in the trend without the new law or that pornographic comics will be totally eliminated. The violence and gore have provided considerable incomes for the vendors, as well as the publishers, and many have indicated reluctance to remove the offensive comics until it is absolutely necessary.

One publisher, much to the distress of parents, reportedly plans to change the format from his best selling violent comic books into weekly or daily publications in newspaper form. And there were rumors of other comic book publishers going underground.

One member of the Legislative Council warned that the responsibility for ultimately keeping unsuitable books away from children rests upon the parents. "Unless parents realize the genuine dangers and measure up to their responsibilities," he said, "the purpose of the legislation can only be partially achieved."

Gallup poll

Kennedy pulls out while ahead

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Sen. Edward Kennedy's renewed disavowal that he is a presidential candidate comes at a time when he has moved into a clear lead over President Ford in the latest nationwide trial heat.

Kennedy's margin over Ford is 50 to 43 per cent. In the previous survey (May 30-June 2), the two were deadlocked, with Kennedy winning the support of 45 per cent of registered voters to 44 per cent for Ford. In a still earlier survey, conducted soon after Ford took office last August, the new President held a wide 57 to 33 per cent lead over Kennedy.

Kennedy, far and away the number one choice of Democratic voters for their party's nomination, is the only Democrat tested during Ford's year in office who is able to defeat the President in these trial heats.

Many political observers feel that Kennedy will definitely not be a candidate for President in 1976, yet speculation persists regarding attempts to draft him.

Here are the questions asked in the survey: "Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If President Gerald Ford were the Republican candidate and Sen. Edward Kennedy were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win?"

All those who indicated another preference or had no opinion were then asked:

"As of today do you lean more to Ford, the Republican, or to Kennedy, the Democrat?"

Here are the latest national findings and trend, based on the choices of registered voters:

KENNEDY-FORD TRIAL HEAT (Choices of Registered Voters)

LATEST .....	50	43	7
May 30-June 2 .....	45	44	11
August 1974 .....	33	57	10

When Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is added to the test as a possible third party candidate, Kennedy widens his lead over Ford. The three-way results show Kennedy with 42 per cent, Ford with 33 per cent and Wallace with 17 per cent.

Following are the questions asked: "If Sen. Edward Kennedy were the Democratic candidate and President Gerald Ford were the Republican candidate and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama were the candidate of a third party, which would you like to see win?" (If undecided, this question was then asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Kennedy, the Democrat, Ford, the Republican, or Wallace, the third-party candidate?")

Following are the latest results and trend:

The trial heat results reported today are based on the choices of registered voters among the 1,561 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period July 18-21.

Last family vacation

When you talk about it in years to come, you will refer to it as "The Last Family Vacation."

It will start out like a score of other family vacations... one kid will yell because he has to sit on the hard hump in the middle of the seat. Another will sulk for 300 miles because he can't hear the radio... and another will hang his feet out of the window because his legs are cramped. (When did they grow so tall?)

There will still be the perennial recording of "When we gonna eat?" (muted because their mouths are full of food).

And you'll ask, "Anyone for a hamburger? A salad? A piggy wiggly hot dog?" (did it always cost $20 to buy them lunch?)

Boredom hangs like a thick fog over the entire back seat.

"Hey, kids," you say. "Look at the colors in that mountain."

"Gross..."

"Would you believe that sunset? It's like a painting."

"Gross..."

"Hey, group, Daddy and I are going to chip in and buy you all a new word when we stop."

"Gross..." (When did the excitement of a mountain give way to Mad magazine?)

At the beach, you begin to suspect things are changing when you and Daddy are the only two splashing around in the water. One child is in a phone booth making plans to split. Another has found a girl and is trying to palm himself off as an orphan. And the other is going through Daddy's trousers getting the car keys. (When did they stop talking to us?)

Going home, it is like old times. They are excited at the idea of going swimming with a friend, making it in time for a party, and bolting to their rooms to turn up the stereo until their ears shrivel.

As you unload the car, there is a silence. Without saying a word, everyone seems to know what the silence means. It is a moratorium to the last family vacation.

It will never be the same again. The wet diapers in the plastic bags under your feet, the soggy cookies... strains of "This Old Man He Played One"... burying your feet in the sand... cries of "He's hitting"... the cold caves, the burnt hot dogs, the camper that leaked... the giggles at bedtime... the laundromats and the wonderful, warm feeling that a woman feels when she sees her family tucked in at night.

It is the end of an era... the beginning of a new one.

You might allow yourself the luxury of a tear. Or you might say to yourself half in anger, "God! Why did I spend every summer vacation yelling, 'Don't throw rocks in the water' and 'Don't sit on the seats!'"

Compounding the problem is the lack of suitable literature for Chinese children.

Submitting a petition to the Gov. Sir Murray MacLehose, comic book publishers claimed the tough crackdown posed a

Low cholesterol eggs

I have heard that there are some types of eggs that are especially low in cholesterol. For an egg lover, this intrigues me. Is this fact or fiction?

Mr. J.K., Ind.

Dear Mr. K.:

The Department of Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association seems to be intrigued by this possibility.

Dr. Herman Dillon, of the AMA, has some interesting things to say about eggs, their color and their cholesterol content.

He said that eggs with dark shells are slightly higher in cholesterol than white shell eggs. This apparently was reported by the Iowa State College.

Contrary to the belief of some, hens that have been fed diets containing polyunsaturated vegetable oils have produced eggs whose cholesterol and saturated fat content are almost exactly the same as average eggs.

Special claims have been made that eggs produced by the South American Araucana chicken are particularly low in cholesterol. These claims have not been thoroughly substantiated.

Until there is absolute proof, people who have a cholesterol problem should still stay away from a high-egg diet.

Under what circumstances is it necessary to feed a patient through the veins?

Miss S.S., S.D.

Dear Miss S.:

Intravenous feeding is used when a patient is unable to take fluid by mouth. Frequently, after surgery, before a patient has completely reacted from anesthesia, fluid loss is replaced in this way.

It is also used when there are specific reasons why swallowing fluid or food is not advisable. Patients with nausea and vomiting must be nourished in this manner.

It is possible, through the intravenous tube, to supply special nourishment with sugar and concentrated vitamins and minerals.

The fact that a patient is being treated in this way does not necessarily indicate that he is in serious difficulty. Medication can also be introduced into the tube.

Patients can be sustained with intravenous feedings for a long time, until their condition warrants the discontinuance of this form of treatment.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — The other evening at "21," I met Carol Channing and the girl was in her usual state of excitement. I was surprised to see her in New York since I knew she was touring in her Broadway hit "Lorelei." Carol explained that she had taken the day off to return for a visit to her alma mater, Bennington College; earlier she had delivered the commencement address. For Carol, speaking at Bennington is one of the great honors of her life, ranking with two Command Performances for the Queen of England, to say nothing of Tony Awards, Emmy nominations, Oscar nominations, and the like.

Carol, the perennial optimist, said, "I am happy to report that now things are looking up . . . and I am sleeping much better since I know there is a Bennington girl in the White House. Yes, we claim Betty Ford as a Bennington girl. It was during her time at Bennington College with Martha Graham in the Summer Dance Festival that I first became aware of Bennington College. At that time Bennington was not coeducational, but the gossip says that we had just as many men in the dormitories then as today, only then they didn't pay tuition."

Carol feels that she owes a great deal to her college. She says because of her Bennington experience, "I am excused for many indiscretions and shortcomings. For instance, you will find that when you are not dressed exactly for the occasion . . . well, I personally have the faculty of most always wearing the wrong thing and I hear people mumble, 'What do you expect?' I hear she went to Bennington . . . isn't that where the girls dressed in jeans and went barefoot?" You know, Jack, I think we old settlers from those early classes at Bennington should get credit for being the first hippies. In fact, we were hippies before there ever was such a thing!

"Jack," Carol went on, "I will be forever grateful to Bennington because we girls were expected to leave school for two months and get a job at whatever it was we were majoring in. At that time it was called our 'winter period' . . . I think it is now known as the 'non-resident term.' Well, since I was a drama-dance major, I naturally hot-footed it to Broadway to get a job performing.

"Now, the biggest theatrical booking agency was, and it still is, The William Morris Office, so I went straight away there . . . and asked to speak with the president, a Mr. Abe Lastfogel. Now, Abe Lastfogel is a man who is known as having a touch of genius. So he never saw anybody, excepting occasionally Clark Gable . . . and of course, Mrs. Lastfogel. He saw a lot of her.

"Well, somehow, through some mistake of his secretary's, there I was, face to face with the great man himself . . . this rugged tycoon . . . who could make or break anyone's career with a single bite on his cigar. Well, I swung right into my first number, something I was sure of because it was a big hit with the girls at Bennington . . . (that's another thing that I will be eternally grateful for is the appreciation of my classmates) . . . anyway, it was a simple ancient Gallic dirge in obsolete Vercingetorix French adapted from the original Greek tragedy, 'Orestes' . . . and I did the most thrilling part of the whole thing, 'The Orestes Funeral Chant.'

"I remember how Mr. Lastfogel's eyes filled with wonderment as I showed him how the women of the Greek chorus lamented the ravages of war and the shortage of men.

"Jack, would you believe that Mr. Lastfogel thought I should do someone better known like Sophie Tucker or Ethel Merman . . . as I say, the man has a touch of genius. As he was showing me to the door, I said, 'No, please Mr. Lastfogel, I have a beautiful song here that I ran across in my studies on Mittel-European cultures, and I must do it for you!' And before he could bite down on his cigar, I sang the song and the dear man smiled, patted me on the shoulder and said that his grandmother used to sing songs like that to him when he was a very little boy. And do you know to this day, Abe Lastfogel and I have sung that little song together, and he has been my agent ever since! And, what is more, the William Morris Office sent me to see Marc Blitstein, the eminent composer, and he auditioned me for a part in his production 'No for an Answer' and I got the job!

"Well, I rushed back to Bennington . . . and here again I will be eternally grateful to the faculty since they all said, 'Don't worry, Carol, you can always come back, get your experience while you can.' Well, that was in 1940, and here I am after 35 years, and I am still getting experience . . . I know it seems like rather an extended 'winter period!' . . . but that is what it is that I am on . . . I am still on my 'non-resident term!'

We asked Carol if she didn't think it was more difficult for graduates today to get started. Carol, always the Pollyanna, told us that "it's always difficult to get started. If there isn't a depression, it's a recession . . . it never bothered me when I was told that the theater was dying and that there were more actors out of work than any other profession. I figured that if I could live through Bennington, I could survive anything — even 'Broadway!' Besides, if you can be discouraged or side-tracked, you are discouraged or side-tracked. What Bennington allows you to do is to develop the thing that you're going to do anyway, over everybody's dead body. But it gives you the floor and foundation to build on, and forces you to plunge into wider territories of it than you ever would otherwise have had the nerve to do. It removes the fear."

"You see, Jack," Carol concluded, "I hope that what the graduates have learned and experience at Bennington will help them as much as it still helps me. And Jack, whenever I get finished with this everlasting 'winter period,' or 'non-resident term,' I am going back to college in hopes of getting my degree. After all, learning is a never ending process . . . and I will always want to be known as a Bennington girl."

And with that Miss Channing, pulling herself together bag and baggage, dashed out to make the nearest plane to rejoin her "Lorelei" company.

Ann Landers

Modern living

Dear Ann Landers: We'd like to know what you think of the latest wrinkle in housing arrangements. It's career women sharing apartments with single men. No sex, they say — word of honor, just a nice, wholesome platonic relationship that works out well, especially for the female. Why? Because, she says, a male roommate is less nosy, more responsible, neater and better organized than the single, working woman.

I asked a certain gal who is involved in such a living arrangement, "What about your reputation?" She replied, "You must be kidding. The new morality has changed all that nonsense. No one pays any attention anymore. Only the squares and dried-up Puritans frown on this great setup. And who cares what THEY think?" Your opinion is wanted. —

Undy-sided

Dear Undy: A couple of swinging singles, just living together for convenience sake — no sex. Oh yeah? "Feed it to Sweeney," as they used to say back in the '40s.

Assuming they start out as "buddies," that number would play for three weeks. I say nix to the whole setup — but then I'm one of those square, dried-up Puritans, so who cares what I think?

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you printed a letter from a bitter, heartbroken woman who doubted the existence of God. She asked, "If there is a God, where was he when our only son was killed in Viet Nam?"

Her pastor, trying to console her, replied, "The same place He was when His only son was killed."

Perhaps this response will give consolation to others. It helped me get through a recent tragedy. —

I See It Now

Dear Friend: Thanks for your letter. I hope others see it, too.

Lies to parents

THE TRUTH: (Q.) I can't seem to tell my parents the truth about where I'm going. I just think they'll say, "No, you can't go." Please help me. I am 16 and a girl. —

In Demand in Alabama (A.) Hey, give your parents a chance to surprise you. Most mothers and dads are so happy to know their children are honest and trustworthy that they'll cooperate to help them stay that way.

Another thing: If you get into the habit of lying about one little detail, you will find it easy to lie about other details, bigger details, important matters. Before you know it, nobody will believe you. A person whom no one believes can't function very well.

That's an awful feeling — when nobody trusts you. Being honest feels GOOD.

NO WHEELS: (Q.) I've wanted a 10-speed bike for about a year now. I need it very badly for transportation and recreation. All my friends have one and I feel left out. I'm willing to pay for it myself.

But my parents say bikes are too dangerous. Every time I ask they say that, and they won't talk about it anymore. Please help me. —

IN DESPAIR IN PENNSYLVANIA (A.) Bicycles ARE dangerous in heavy traffic. If your friends ride their bikes on main thoroughfares, your parents have a strong point. You shouldn't do this.

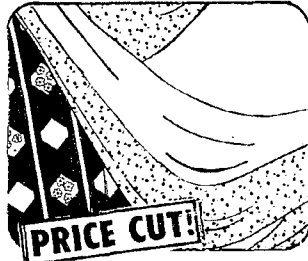

But perhaps there are protected bike trails in your community. Or maybe there are quiet neighborhood streets you could practice on. Talk to them about this possibility.

Compassion, respect, key in treating dying patients

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles on death, how the medical profession cares and treats terminally ill patients and in tomorrow's segment, how clergymen comfort dying people.)

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter
EAST STROUDSBURG — Although death is a kind of defeat for doctors and nurses, they are the ones who face the problem of how to help a dying patient through it.

Nurses are prepared to help a dying patient and his family in all aspects of their training, although they usually don't take a course solely about it.

Mrs. Katherine J. Mosley, in-service director at the General Hospital of Monroe County, said nurses are taught to have an empathy with their patients.

"It's that closeness and friendliness the patient feels. Even if he can't respond, a nurse's touch will satisfy the patient," she said.

"It's that eye contact that shows the patient her friendliness," she added.

Nurses care for the dying patient's family as well as the patient by staying with them, offering condolences and drawing room curtains for privacy.

Mrs. Mosley said it wasn't unusual for a nurse to take coffee or tea to family members.

"The families will ask the nurses to be with their family member if they can't be there so he won't be alone," Mrs. Mosley said.

Doctors consider their patient's fears and anxieties when discussing his illness and its treatment.

"Some are very sensitive, some are fearful and some are very strong and can take anything," said Dr. Theodore Kowalyszyn, a doctor of internal medicine with a specialty in hematology who has been treating terminally ill patients for five years.

"For most people it's a real blow to learn they have a malignant disease. It must be given gently," he said.

"You don't just walk into a room and say 'Weil, you've got cancer,'" Dr. Kowalyszyn added.

He often leads to his diagnosis gradually by explaining what possible answers may come from the lab or by describing symptoms.

For example, he may tell a man who has just come from the operating room that there's a chance he has a malignancy but they'll just have to wait for the lab report.

After making a diagnosis, Dr. Kowalyszyn said he always discusses it with his patient honestly.

"As a general rule, they're very capable of handling the fact as long as they're treated as people and given some consideration for their feelings," he stated firmly.

Above all, he tries to give his patients hope.

"In any situation there's hope. If they don't have hope, there's really not much left," he stated firmly.

Dr. Kowalyszyn said it's impossible to try to hide a terminal illness from a patient or his family.

A patient will know he hasn't been told something if he receives special meals at home or has changed or increased medical treatments.

"You can't hide it. Even a child will know something more is going on. And then they develop a deep sense of distrust," he said.

"A lot of families don't want the patient to know, but that's not the best way to handle it. The patient will have complications from his illness and will be astute enough to know something else is going on he hasn't been told about," he explained.

"How can you tell someone he's going to be all right and then suggest he make out a will?" the doctor continued.

He said he isn't obligated to tell a patient's spouse or immediate family about the illness but said he encourages the patient to let others know.

Dr. Elisabeth Kubler Ross, who has written and lectured internationally about terminal patients, believes such patients go through stages of denial, anger, bargaining, depression and resignation.

However, not all patients go through all these stages while others may not pass beyond a stage.

"Some never get out of the denial stage. That's all right if that's what the patient wants," Dr. Kowalyszyn said.

A patient's first reaction is to deny what's happened to him.

"It must be a mistake" or "It can't be true" is usually the first thing he says," explained Dr. Kowalyszyn.

If a terminal patient follows Dr. Ross's pattern, he'll enter the anger stage where his response becomes "Why me?"

After that he may try to bargain with the doctor to live for a certain event or to a specific time.

An elderly woman may want to live just long enough for her first grandchild to be born, for example.

Then a patient may become depressed and finally resigned to his illness.

Dr. Kowalyszyn believes terminally ill patients should be able to spend as much time at home as they want and "in familiar surroundings at home where there's lots of understanding."

Most of his patients continue to live much as they did before they learned of their illnesses and few do anything special.

"Many people can't afford those extras. With the type of illness they have, their resources are often tested. Most have gone on more or less the way they would have," Dr. Kowalyszyn explained.

Despite what is often depicted in movies or on television, doctors can't tell their patients how long they have to live.

"There's no way you can predict how long the patient's going to live. You can only tell him about the disease," said Dr. Kowalyszyn.

The patient can be told how long most people live, as well as the exceptions. He can also be told future symptoms and how the disease may progress.

"If you're honest, they know they have things they have to do and are armed to handle any potential problems that might come up," he added.

"Death is something that's going to come to everyone," he said quietly.

LAYING IT ON THE LINE — "For most people it's a real blow to learn they have a malignant disease. It must be given gently . . . . In any situation there's hope . . . . Most patients continue to live much as they did before . . . ."

Club cries foul on negotiations

STROUDSBURG — The president of the Italian Mutual Benefit Association has accused several state agencies with not negotiating in good faith for a lease on offices the club rented to the Commonwealth for 17 years.

Ted Margretta, of Stroudsburg, said the club was forced to order the Bureau of Employment Security's eviction after it "became evident the state did not want to negotiate a new lease with us."

The bureau moved its offices from the Lower Main Street,

Stroudsburg building, to the CLU Club, South Courtland St., East Stroudsburg August 1 and 2.

Margretta said the club rented the offices to the state for 17 years without getting a raise in rent.

"We were losing $1,000 a year on the building. All we wanted to do was get a little return on our investment."

He claimed the club made several offers to the state for a new lease rate, but that the state never made a counter offer.

"There was no negotiations. What could we do. We didn't put them out of the building. I don't think they even wanted to stay."

A spokesman for the state Bureau of Property and Supplies denied Margretta's allegation the state refused to negotiate.

"We made counterproposals to the landlord, but they were rejected," the spokesman said.

Margretta said the club notified the state well in advance of the June 1 lease expiration that the lease would have to be rewritten and a new rent negotiated.

"We had agreed to meet handicapped facilities requirements as they asked," Margretta said. "As long as they paid for it."

"We wanted to negotiate a common-sense type lease. For 15 years we were paid $2.48 per square foot. We could not afford it anymore," he added.

The property and supplies spokesman said the club wanted to raise the rent to $6.50 a square foot, but came down to $4.70 without utilities and $5.10 including utilities.

"We got a better offer and we expect to sign a lease for a new property very soon," the spokesman said.

He said it was bureau policy to disclose new property sites only after a lease is signed and would not say where the new location would be.

Margretta said he was appalled at the way the state worked to continue using properties.

"The bureaucracy is amazing. We had meetings several times. Each time someone else would show up. Nobody could give us answers though. They had to go back to someone in Harrisburg, either the employment bureau, property and supplies or the state treasury department."

A whole day of fun in Eastburg

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter
EAST STROUDSBURG —

They wrestled a watermelon, dove for money, hunted peanuts, hobbled in sacks, muddled in mud and finally gorged themselves on pretzel sticks.

They weren't crazy and no one forced them to perform these treacherous feats. All evidence supports this conclusion after nearly five hours of observation.

"Incredible," you say. Not really. Kids will be kids and when they heard about Saturday's Kiddie Day at Dansbury Park, East Stroudsburg they apparently decided to show-up en masse.

Like a gaggle of geese and nearly as loud, kids flocked to the park to compete for prizes by contorting their bodies for the Craziest Dive or flopping-off the high diving board to create the Biggest Splash.

"Here goes nothing," yelled one fearless diver as he wreathed in mid-air spasm before completing his crazy dive.

"Was that supposed to be funny," shouted one on-looker.

"Yea, I'd like to see you do one," was the quick response of the diver. The spectator critic, a bit smaller in stature, ceased to criticize.

Divided into playground and pool activities, Kiddie Day lasted for five hours and culminated in a free picnic for over 100 kids who attended the event.

"I don't think there are as many kids here this year as last year," said Mike Boushell, Dansbury Park director. "There was a Little League picnic and the Pocono Air Show and some other events that probably drew a number of kids away."

Boushell said about $35 from park funds covered the cost of prizes for the kids, but food for the free picnic was donated by local businesses and individuals.

From Ehrlich's Market

came hot dogs and rolls, Laesser Paper Co. donated plates and cups, Twin County Distributors distributed sodas, Golden Ice Cream Co. donated the ice cream and Mayor Charles Merring gave the kids a watermelon.

The watermelon, which became the object of fierce pool competition, was later coated with a thick layer of vaseline. The greased fruit was tossed into the pool by a lifeguard as two teams fought to capture it.

Slimmy and wet, the watermelon was pushed, shoved, knocked, battered and dunked numerous times before one team finally gained possession of the slippery mini-blimp.

To the victors went the spoils, but, fortunately, it wasn't spoiled fruit. Kids discovered watermelon made a refreshing afternoon snack once the vaseline was removed.

Vaseline, an important ingreredient at the park's activities, was used a second time to grease a pole for the pole climbing contest.

"I can't even climb a pole when it ain't greased," shouted one beleaguered contestant.

For most kids it was a day of fun and some minor disappointments.

Shirlene Werkheiser, an East Stroudsburg youngster, said she entered three swimming contests and "I didn't win one."

Walking over to the wheelbarrow race, she mused, "I really wonder if I should enter this one." Once there, she made a bold decision and decided to become a wheelbarrow.

Craig Seese, nine, and Christopher Robbin, eight, both of East Stroudsburg also entered the wheelbarrow race and placed third. The object of the race is to have a friend hold your feet and then walk on your arms to get across the finish line.

Craig and Chris were pretty good, but they didn't place first. Why?

"I got a flat tire on the way down," Craig simply explained.

It was hard to see what actually happened with all the human wheelbarrows, but apparently Chris's arm gave out.

Russell Brown, the champion pretzel eater who ate two pretzel sticks in one minute without leaving a crumb, said this is the first time he came to Kiddie Day.

"I think it's fun. I don't think they should change anything," he said.

And for Brian Werkheiser, 10, of Hainesburg, N.J., Kiddie Day is better than similar activities in school because "here we get prizes."

Blowing bubbles from a bubble kit he won, Brian said, "In school they just give certificates."

Mrs. Adams was convicted of involuntary manslaughter by an eight-man, four-woman jury following a six-day trial.

The jury could have returned a verdict of third degree murder, voluntary manslaughter or not guilty in the case.

During the trial, Mrs. Adams took the witness stand in her own behalf to deny that she ever struck the child. The only other person who was alone with the baby that day was a 14-year-old babysitter.

In denying the appeal, Judge Williams said the jury believed the babysitter's testimony and not that of the defendant. "It was a question of credibility which the jury resolved against the defendant."

Scramble to the finish in wheelbarrow race.

'You can never get used to death'

EAST STROUDSBURG — David, a young man who had been married recently, played a round of golf despite a terminal heart disease.

The next day he was admitted to a hospital where he told the staff he had done it because he didn't want to "baby" himself.

One of his nurses realized his family wouldn't reach the hospital in time and sat next to him, cradling his head in her arms until he died.

Her experience is typical of nurses who care for terminally ill patients.

Mrs. Carol Frazier, director of nursing at Stroud Manor, said nurses never get hardened to death.

"You never get used to it. You still feel. You don't say 'There goes another one,'" she said.

"Every person's body can't be put back in order once it's out of order," Mrs. Vivian Grunewald said.

"Young heart patients die horribly," added Mrs. Grunewald.

Patients can also comfort each other.

"The old are selfish. They want everything for themselves. But when it comes down to the wire or something happens, they feel compassion," Mrs. Grunewald said.

"Other patients feel compassion. If there's someone who never gets flowers or if she knows someone likes candy and she has enough, another patient will send hers to them," she continued.

Advertising pays off for vacation bureau

STROUDSBURG — Increased advertising in the large metropolitan areas has resulted in nearly twice as many inquiries at the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau (PMVB) this year than last.

"We're getting a tremendous upsurge," said Robert Ugucioni, PMVB executive director. "It's been a fantastic year."

Ugucioni said so far this year there have been about 60,000 inquiries, including letters and telephone calls. Last year at this time, there had only been about 30,000 inquiries, he said.

The bureau director said the doubling of information requests was probably a direct result of "doing a lot more advertising" in New York, Philadelphia and New Jersey.

With high gasoline prices, people are looking for places closer to home, Ugucioni stated. "People today look to travel a shorter distance."

The vacation bureau has asked the Monroe County Commissioners for four workers under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). The bureau is presently sharing one employee with the Chamber of Commerce in public relations.

Ugucioni said the bureau can use the extra workers at roadside information booths and in the office. "We have a tremendous workload, especially with the phone calls. And we still have the rest of the year to go through."

Planners meet

TANNERSVILLE — The regular meeting of the Pocono Township Planning Commission will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the municipal building in Tannersville. The public is invited to attend.

Task force wants Tocks abandoned

BELVIDERE, N.J. — The Four County Task Force Friday voted to send a letter to the U.S. Congress urging that it follow the Delaware River Basin Commission's (DRBC) recommendation to deauthorize the Tocks Island Dam.

Mrs. Nancy B. Shukaitis, a Monroe county commissioner and coordinator member of the task force, said the group based its decision on the DRBC's decision and a letter from the Council on Environmental Quality which said the dam should not be built.

Mrs. Shukaitis said the task force members also discussed asking the government to allow stores, post offices and other existing public services to remain to serve the tourists which will be attracted to the national recreation area.

Mrs. Shukaitis said the task force agreed the services should be allowed to remain since the area is probably not going to be flooded.

The task force also voted to ask the federal government to give "life rights" to persons who want to remain on their property since the land is not needed for the Tocks Island Lake.

Mrs. Shukaitis said there are about 35 per cent of the property owners within the boundaries of the proposed national recreation area who still remain.

The task force will participate in a meeting at 9 a.m.

Saturday, Aug. 6 in the Montague School in Sussex County, New Jersey where residents still living in the area proposed for the national park will meet to discuss alternatives they have.

Compassion, respect, key in treating dying patients

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter
EAST STROUDSBURG — Although death is a kind of defeat for doctors and nurses, they are the ones who face the problem of how to help a dying patient through it.

Nurses are prepared to help a dying patient and his family in all aspects of their training, although they usually don't take a course solely about it.

Mrs. Katherine J. Mosley, in-service director at the General Hospital of Monroe County, said nurses are taught to have an empathy with their patients.

"It's that closeness and friendliness the patient feels. Even if he can't respond, a nurse's touch will satisfy the patient," she said.

"It's that eye contact that shows the patient her friendliness," she added.

Nurses care for the dying patient's family as well as the patient by staying with them, offering condolences and drawing room curtains for privacy.

Mrs. Mosley said it wasn't unusual for a nurse to take coffee or tea to family members.

"The families will ask the nurses to be with their family member if they can't be there so he won't be alone," Mrs. Mosley said.

Doctors consider their patient's fears and anxieties when discussing his illness and its treatment.

"Some are very sensitive, some are fearful and some are very strong and can take anything," said Dr. Theodore Kowalyszyn, a doctor of internal medicine with a specialty in hematology who has been treating terminally ill patients for five years.

"For most people it's a real blow to learn they have a malignant disease. It must be given gently," he said.

"You don't just walk into a room and say 'Well, you've got cancer,'" Dr. Kowalyszyn added.

He often leads to his diagnosis gradually by explaining what possible answers may come from the lab or by describing symptoms.

For example, he may tell a man who has just come from the operating room that there's a chance he has a malignancy but they'll just have to wait for the lab report.

After making a diagnosis, Dr. Kowalyszyn said he always discusses it with his patient honestly.

"As a general rule, they're very capable of handling the fact as long as they're treated as people and given some consideration for their feelings," he stated firmly.

Above all, he tries to give his patients hope.

"In any situation there's hope. If they don't have hope, there's really not much left," he stated firmly.

Dr. Kowalyszyn said it's impossible to try to hide a terminal illness from a patient or his family.

A patient will know he hasn't been told something if he receives special meals at home or has changed or increased medical treatments.

"You can't hide it. Even a child will know something more is going on. And then they develop a deep sense of distrust," he said.

"A lot of families don't want the patient to know, but that's not the best way to handle it. The patient will have complications from his illness and will be astute enough to know something else is going on he hasn't been told about," he explained.

"How can you tell someone he's going to be all right and then suggest he make out a will?" the doctor continued.

He said he isn't obligated to tell a patient's spouse or immediate family about the illness but said he encourages the patient to let others know.

Dr. Elisabeth Kubler Ross, who has written and lectured internationally about terminal patients, believes such patients go through stages of denial, anger, bargaining, depression and resignation.

However, not all patients go through all these stages while others may not pass beyond a stage.

"Some never get out of the denial stage. That's all right if that's what the patient wants," Dr. Kowalyszyn said.

A patient's first reaction is to deny what's happened to him.

"It must be a mistake" or "It can't be true" is usually the first thing he says," explained Dr. Kowalyszyn.

If a terminal patient follows Dr. Ross's pattern, he'll enter the anger stage where his response becomes "Why me?"

After that he may try to bargain with the doctor to live for a certain event or to a specific time.

An elderly woman may want to live just long enough for her first grandchild to be born, for example.

Then a patient may become depressed and finally resigned to his illness.

Dr. Kowalyszyn believes ter-

minally ill patients should be able to spend as much time at home as they want and "in familiar surroundings at home where there's lots of understanding."

Most of his patients continue to live much as they did before they learned of their illnesses and few do anything special.

"Many people can't afford those extras. With the type of illness they have, their resources are often tested. Most have gone on more or less the way they would have," Dr. Kowalyszyn explained.

Despite what is often depicted in movies or on television, doctors can't tell their patients how long they have to live.

"There's no way you can predict how long the patient's going to live. You can only tell him about the disease," said Dr. Kowalyszyn.

The patient can be told how long most people live, as well as the exceptions. He can also be told future symptoms and how the disease may progress.

"If you're honest, they know they have things they have to do and are armed to handle any potential problems that might come up," he added.

"Death is something that's going to come to everyone," he said quietly.

LAYING IT ON THE LINE — "For most people it's a real blow to learn they have a malignant disease. It must be given gently . . . . In any situation there's hope . . . . Most patients continue to live much as they did before . . . ."

Club cries foul on negotiations

STROUDSBURG — The president of the Italian Mutual Benefit Association has accused several state agencies with not negotiating in good faith for a lease on offices the club rented to the Commonwealth for 17 years.

Ted Margretta, of Stroudsburg, said the club was forced to order the Bureau of Employment Security's eviction after it "became evident the state did not want to negotiate a new lease with us."

The bureau moved its offices from the Lower Main Street,

Stroudsburg building, to the CLU Club, South Courtland St., East Stroudsburg August 1 and 2.

Margretta said the club rented the offices to the state for 17 years without getting a raise in rent.

"We were losing $1,000 a year on the building. All we wanted to do was get a little return on our investment."

He claimed the club made several offers to the state for a new lease rate, but that the state never made a counter offer.

"There was no negotiations. What could we do. We didn't put them out of the building. I don't think they even wanted to stay."

A spokesman for the state Bureau of Property and Supplies denied Margretta's allegation the state refused to negotiate.

"We made counterproposals to the landlord, but they were rejected," the spokesman said.

Margretta said the club notified the state well in advance of the June 1 lease expiration that the lease would have to be rewritten and a new rent negotiated.

"We had agreed to meet handicapped facilities requirements as they asked," Margretta said. "As long as they paid for it."

"We wanted to negotiate a common-sense type lease. For 15 years we were paid $2.48 per square foot. We could not afford it anymore," he added.

The property and supplies spokesman said the club wanted to raise the rent to $6.50 a square foot, but came down to $4.70 without utilities and $5.10 including utilities.

"We got a better offer and we expect to sign a lease for a new property very soon," the spokesman said.

He said it was bureau policy to disclose new property sites only after a lease is signed and would not say where the new location would be.

Margretta said he was appalled at the way the state worked to continue using properties.

"The bureaucracy is amazing. We had meetings several times. Each time someone else would show up. Nobody could give us answers though. They had to go back to someone in Harrisburg, either the employment bureau, property and supplies or the state treasury department."

A whole day of fun in Eastburg

By BRUCE POSTEN

Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — They wrestled a watermelon, dove for money, hunted peanuts, hobbled in sacks, muddled in mud and finally gorged themselves on pretzel sticks.

They weren't crazy and no one forced them to perform these treacherous feats. All evidence supports this conclusion after nearly five hours of observation.

"Incredible," you say. Not really. Kids will be kids and when they heard about Saturday's Kiddie Day at Dansbury Park, East Stroudsburg they apparently decided to show-up en masse.

Like a gaggle of geese and nearly as loud, kids flocked to the park to compete for prizes by comforting their bodies for the Craziest Dive or flopping-off the high diving board to create the Biggest Splash.

"Here goes nothing," yelled one fearless diver as he wreathed in mid-air spasm before completing his crazy dive.

"Was that supposed to be funny," shouted one on-looker.

"Yea, I'd like to see you do one," was the quick response of the diver. The spectator critic, a bit smaller in stature, ceased to criticize.

Divided into playground and pool activities, Kiddie Day lasted for five hours and culminated in a free picnic for over 100 kids who attended the event.

"I don't think there are as many kids here this year as last year," said Mike Boushell, Dansbury Park director. "There was a Little League picnic and the Pocono Air Show and some other events that probably drew a number of kids away."

Boushell said about $35 from park funds covered the cost of prizes for the kids, but food for the free picnic was donated by local businesses and individuals.

From Ehrlich's Market

came hot dogs and rolls, Laesser Paper Co. donated plates and cups, Twin County Distributors distributed sodas, Golden Ice Cream Co. donated the ice cream and Mayor Charles Merring gave the kids a watermelon.

The watermelon, which became the object of fierce pool competition, was later coated with a thick layer of vaseline. The greased fruit was tossed into the pool by a lifeguard as two teams fought to capture it.

Slimmy and wet, the watermelon was pushed, shoved, knocked, battered and dunked numerous times before one team finally gained possession of the slippery mini-blimp.

To the victors went the spoils, but, fortunately, it wasn't spoiled fruit. Kids discovered watermelon made a refreshing afternoon snack once the vaseline was removed.

Vaseline, an important ingre-

redient at the park's activities, was used a second time to grease a pole for the pole climbing contest.

"I can't even climb a pole when it ain't greased," shouted one beleaguered contestant.

For most kids it was a day of fun and some minor disappointments.

Shirlene Werkheiser, an East Stroudsburg youngster, said she entered three swimming contests and "I didn't win one."

Walking over to the wheelbarrow race, she mused, "I really wonder if I should enter this one." Once there, she made a bold decision and decided to become a wheelbarrow.

Craig Secse, nine, and Christopher Robbin, eight, both of East Stroudsburg also entered the wheelbarrow race and placed third. The object of the race is to have a friend hold your feet and then walk on your arms to get across the finish line.

Craig and Chris were pretty good, but they didn't place first. Why?

"I got a flat tire on the way down," Craig simply explained.

It was hard to see what actually happened with all the human wheelbarrows, but apparently Chris's arm gave out.

Russell Brown, the champion pretzel eater who ate two pretzel sticks in one minute without leaving a crumb, said this is the first time he came to Kiddie Day.

"I think it's fun. I don't think they should change anything," he said.

And for Brian Werkheiser, 10, of Hainesburg, N.J., Kiddie Day is better than similar activities in school because "here we get prizes."

Blowing bubbles from a bubble kit he won, Brian said, "In school they just give certificates."

Scramble to the finish in wheelbarrow race.

Nurses help dying patients

'You can never get used to death'

EAST STROUDSBURG — David, a young man who had been married recently, played a round of golf despite a terminal heart disease.

The next day he was admitted to a hospital where he told the staff he had done it because he didn't want to "baby" himself.

One of his nurses realized his family wouldn't reach the hospital in time and sat next to him, cradling his head in her arms until he died.

Her experience is typical of nurses who care for terminally ill patients.

Mrs. Carol Frazier, director of nursing at Stroud Manor, said nurses never get hardened to death.

"You never get used to it. You still feel. You don't say 'There goes another one,'" she said.

"Every person's body can't be put back in order once it's out of order," Mrs. Vivian Grunewald said.

Mrs. Grunewald, who has been a nurse for 27 years, said a patient knows when a nurse is really concerned.

"They know if you're sincere by the sound of your voice and the touch of your hand," she said.

Often nurses can comfort a patient by just being there to listen.

"Just this morning one of my patients asked if she were ready to go into the coma. I asked if that was what she was waiting for and she said yes, more than anything," Mrs. Grunewald recalled.

Both women thought it was hardest to watch a young person die.

"I remember a young woman, 28-years-old, who had cancer. It was hard to watch her whither away and leave her family. I didn't know what to say to the family," Mrs. Frazier said.

"Young heart patients die

horribly," added Mrs. Grunewald.

Patients can also comfort each other.

"The old are selfish. They want everything for themselves. But when it comes down to the wire or something happens, they feel compassion," Mrs. Grunewald said.

"Other patients feel compassion. If there's someone who never gets flowers or if she knows someone likes candy and she has enough, another patient will send hers to them," she continued.

Police blotter

Alleged burglar shot

HAWLEY — A Hawley man is in guarded condition at the Scranton Community Medical Center after being shot by the brother of the man whose car he was allegedly stealing.

According to state police at Honesdale, Douglas Bruning, 24, of 233 Hudson St., Hawley was observed stealing Carl Kennedy's car from the driveway of the R.D. 1 Hawley residence by Kennedy and his brother Bruce.

The brothers ran outside and yelled to Bruning to stop. When he didn't, Bruce Kennedy apparently fired a .22 calibre pistol at him. The car then crossed the highway and struck a tree.

Police reported two other stolen vehicles have been recovered and the investigation by Tpr. James Timko and Wayne County District Attorney Robert Conway is continuing. Police said another individual is being sought in connection with the case.

Two injured in wreck

MILFORD — A 12:40 a.m. Sunday one-vehicle accident on Rte. 390 at Promised Land State Park left two people hospitalized.

The driver, Frank Cortese, 21, of Coraopolis was reported in satisfactory condition at the Wayne Memorial Hospital. His passenger, Glynis Lyons, 21, was reported in good condition.

Cortese was traveling south on Rte. 390, failed to negotiate a right hand curve, went off the road and struck a tree.

Deputy sheriff catches fugitive

MILFORD — Pike County Deputy Sheriff Keith Raser Saturday apprehended a Georgia man wanted for burglary, larceny and numerous other offenses who had fled here to avoid prosecution more than a year ago.

Frank Portner, 32, of Georgia is wanted by the sheriff's department of Fannin County, Georgia.

Fire 'very suspicious'

EAST STROUDSBURG — Acme Hose Company fire chief William LaBarre described as "very suspicious" a 7 p.m. Sunday trash and tire fire behind Pat & Red's Tire Store, 107 Brown St.

"What the fire was shouldn't have been," the chief explained, adding there was no reason for it to have started.

The fire investigation was turned over to the East Stroudsburg police. There was no estimate of damages and no injuries. Five trucks and 45 men answered the call and the fire was out in 20 minutes.

Nicklaus reigns as PGA king for fourth time

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — "It's probably been my best year," Jack Nicklaus said. He may be right.

A golf year that started off with Johnny Miller telling the world he was ready to push Nicklaus aside just about ended Sunday with Nicklaus reasserting himself as the game's dominant performer by winning the PGA Championship for the fourth time.

It was the 16th major championship of Nicklaus' magnificent career, extending his own record.

He has had 14 years on the pro tour, not all of them great, but most of them pretty darn good. It's tough to separate the very good from the excellent but Nicklaus tried to put things in perspective after beating Bruce Crampton by two strokes to add the PGA Championship to the Masters title he won last April.

"I've had years where I won more tournaments," he said. "But as far as my consistency, as far as the way I've played, it's probably been my best year, really."

"I think it's a great year," he said. "Winning two major titles separates it from a lot of other years."

Nicklaus was four strokes ahead of Crampton at the start of the day, faltered briefly with two bogeys on the first three holes that trimmed his lead in half, then took charge again.

No one, including Crampton, the runnerup, ever got any closer than two shots to Nicklaus the rest of the way on this warm and muggy day at Firestone Country Club.

Jack did not make another bogey until it didn't matter, the final hole, where he drove under a tree, took three shots to reach the fringe of the green, and then took three more from there for a double-bogey six.

He shot a 1-over-par 71 and wound up 2 strokes ahead of Crampton with 276, 4 under par for 72 holes.

So once more, as if he really needs to prove anything any more, Nicklaus clinched for himself a pro player-of-the-year award — his third in four years.

It's his second major title of the year to go along with the Masters — he missed out in the U.S. Open by two strokes when he finished with three successive bogeys, and was one behind in the British Open. He has won 14 majors in 14 years as a pro, a record even if you chose not to count the two U.S. Amateur titles that boost it to 16.

"If you win one major title in a year it's a good year," Nicklaus said a couple of days ago. "Two make it a great year."

That's exactly what it is. He leads the money list with $248,599, counting his $45,000 from the PGA. That's more than he won in all of 1974. He has won four tournaments this year.

The finish was remarkably similar to Nicklaus' very first PGA title, a dozen years ago in Dallas when he was only 23 years old. Crampton led him by three strokes on the final day, Jack outshot Bruce 68-74, and won.

In 1972, at both the Masters and U.S. Open, Crampton finished second to Nicklaus. In 1973, when Nicklaus won the PGA at Cleveland, not 50 miles from here, to surpass Bobby Jones' major championship record of 13, Crampton again was second.

And Crampton was second this time, too. He got in position on Friday by shooting a 63, a course and tournament record. That was followed by a 75 Saturday and Sunday's 69, which was a good score, but not good enough. Crampton contributed to his own defeat.

Bruce was within two shots of Jack and putting for birdie on the 15th hole, a 230-yard par-3. He ran it 18 inches past the hole. The putt coming back never hit the cup. It was a three-putt bogey.

Nicklaus, playing in the group right behind Crampton, watched it from the tee, then came along and birdied the same hole.

That made the lead four shots again. Bruce was more careful with his next 18-inch putt for par, at the 16th hole, but it rolled all the way around the cup before falling in.

He was grim-faced and tightlipped. Crampton had, in effect, seen his chances destroyed at the 625-yard 16th on Saturday when Nicklaus drove into a water hazard in the woods, shanked another shot across the fairway and still was able to make a miracle recovery for par, even with the penalty.

Finally, on 18, his hopes long gone, Crampton smiled when he hit an approach iron that was nearly perfect. But even then, he missed the putt.

Tom Weiskopf, who birdied 18 for a 68, was third at 279.

Andy North, a 25-year-old third year pro from Gainesville, Fla., shot the day's best round, a 65, and was alone in fourth place at 281.

Hale Irwin and Billy Casper were both at 283 following rounds of 73 and 70, respectively. Gene Littler and Dave Hill were another stroke back with 71 and 68 on Sunday.

The victory, Jack's 57th on the tour, was typical in that he responded to a challenge.

Giants pick apart Patriots, 28-14

FOXBORO, Mass (UPI)

The New York Giants scored two touchdowns in the fourth period to beat the New England Patriots 28-14 Sunday night in the first exhibition game of the season for both teams.

Patriots' safety Sandy Durko set up the first score of the game when he intercepted a Craig Morton pass on the Patriots' 18-yard line. Eight plays later, quarterback Jim Plunkett threw a 44-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Randy Vataha who was wide open along the sidelines.

The Giants tied the game in the second quarter on a Morton pass to wide receiver Walker Gillette, capping a 72-yard drive.

In the third quarter, the Giants took the lead on a two-yard run up the middle by Doug Kotar.

The Patriots tied the game in the fourth quarter on a 17-yard pass by backup quarterback Neil Graff to fullback Sam Cunningham in the end zone.

The Giants responded with two quick touchdowns. Running back Bob Hammond scored on a two-yard run with 8:07 left in the game. On the following kickoff, Patriots' rookie Allen Carter fumbled and New York recovered. Five plays later, Jim Odravodich scored on a three-yard pass from Giants' quarterback Carl Summerell.

Raiders, 34-0

OAKLAND (UPI) — Second year quarterback Larry Lawrence hit on eight of 10 passes for 95 yards and one touchdown in pacing the Oakland Raiders to a 34-0 victory over the Detroit Lions Sunday in a pre-season football game.

Lawrence, who left the game with a knee injury in the third quarter, passed to Morris Bradshaw for 16 yards and a TD in the second quarter. The Raiders scored 24 of their points in the second period.

Detroit was limited to 44 yards total offense in the first half and gained only 103 yards in the game. Only once did the Lions get into Oakland territory.

Rookie Louis Carter, of Maryland, got the Raiders a touchdown in the second

Evert coasts on the clay; Orantes knocks off Vilas

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)

Top-seeded Chris Evert captured her fourth consecutive women's singles title at the $150,000 National Clay Court tennis tourney Sunday, but Spain's Manuel Orantes upset top-seeded Guillermo Vilas and will meet Arthur Ashe in today's finals of the men's singles.

Orantes, seeded No. 3, will meet Wimbledon champion Ashe, seeded second, for the men's title tonight to determine who gets the $16,000 top prize money. Orantes maintained his dominance over Vilas Sunday, having won seven of their 12 matches, including

Young overtakes Palmer

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI)

Two-time U.S. Open champion Donna Caponi Young fired a final round four-under-par 70 Saturday to win the Colgate European Women's Open Golf Championship by two strokes over fellow American Sandra Palmer.

Mrs. Young, of Los Angeles, Calif., had a 72-hole total of 283 in picking up the winner's check of $11,000.

Her victory proved she had regained the championship form after suffering a painful muscle tear in her rib cage earlier this season while hitting a routine wedge shot.

Miss Palmer finished with 74 for a 285 total and pocketed $7,700. Third place went to Japan's Chako Higuchi whose 71 Saturday provided her with a 288 total and $5,500 in prize money.

Starting the final round two strokes behind the favored Miss Palmer, the sturdy little Mrs. Young quickly made up the difference and virtually clinched her victory on the wind-blown, 295-yard 11th where she pitched in from 50 yards for an eagle two.

"That shot was worth $10,000," she enthused afterwards. "It helped me get back at Sandra. Four years ago in the Sears Classic she holed out from a bunker on the last hole for an eagle to beat me and won $6,000 and a new car."

three straight this year without losing a set to Vilas.

In Sunday's match, Orantes, of Barcelona, Spain, downed Vilas 6-4, 6-2.

Ashe, who has been critical of his inconsistent performances at the tourney, defeated Onny Parun of New Zealand, 6-4, 7-6, after winning the second set in a tiebreaker, 7-2.

The women's finals was anything but a birthday party for Miss Fromholtz, who turned 19 Sunday.

Miss Evert needed slightly more than an hour to collect her latest trophy, breaking her opponent's service in the very first game. She broke service twice more while Miss Fromholtz's only service break came in the second game to tie the set at one all. Miss Fromholtz took her only lead by holding service, then Miss Evert took the next three for a 4-2 lead.

In the second set, Miss Evert raced to a 4-0 lead before her opponent rallied, winning four of the next five games to trail only 5-4. Miss Evert took the next game to close out the match.

Rain postpones Talladega 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI)

Rain Sunday forced the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing to delay the Talladega 500 stock car race for one week.

NASCAR officials at the Alabama International Motor Speedway said the $156,000 race would be run at the speedway Aug. 17 at 1:30 p.m. EDT with the same 50-driver lineup.

Track officials said it was the first time rain had delayed a race at Talladega since the track opened in 1969.

Speedway spokesman Ted Griffith said race officials had decided that the slick condition of the track was too dangerous for the nearly treadless Grand National cars. "You couldn't even run a passenger car out there at 100 miles an hour on a day like today," said Griffith.

NASCAR Technical Director Dave Gazaway ordered all 50 cars impounded until next Saturday at 2 p.m. EDT when the drivers will run practice laps around the 2.66-mile high-banked tri-oval.

About 40,000 spectators were in the stands when the final announcement came at 4:45 p.m. EDT, calling off the race, three hours and 45 minutes after it was to have begun.

Speedway officials said the tickets for the race would be honored as rain checks next Sunday.

Connors triumphs

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (UPI)

Jimmy Connors overpowered Ken Rosewall, 6-2, 6-2, in 50 minutes Sunday to win the $100,000 Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

Connors, who destroyed the 40-year old Australian in last year's Wimbledon and U.S.

Open finals, easily controlled the match with deep, booming ground strokes and a powerful serve.

The 22-year-old Connors, the top ranked player in the world, lost only one point on his high kicking service during the second set and capitalized on numerous unforced errors by Rosewall, who played far below the form he displayed earlier in the tournament.

Rosewall lost the opening game by double faulting, hitting a long backhand and committing two bad forehand errors. He never recovered from that beginning.

Rosewall announced after the match he would not play in the U.S. Open this year, but return to Australia for "a combination of personal, family and business reasons."

Connors earned $20,000 and a new car, while Rosewall took home $8,000.

Rader wins singles match

STROUDSBURG

Jill Rader defeated Barb Reese, 7-6, 6-2 Saturday to advance in the singles bracket of the Stroudsburg Women's Open Tennis Tournament.

Rader will now meet Charlotte Anderson in one of two singles matches scheduled for today. The other singles match will pit Edie Longenbach against Mary Ann Higgins.

In a semi-finals doubles match also scheduled for today, Barbara Wilke-Jaquet Cassebaum will face Kay Collins-Jean Clark.

Two area wrestlers win Nazareth titles

NAZARETH

Two area wrestlers emerged as champions in the Nazareth Summer Recreation Wrestling Tournament.

Dan Odom of Pocono Mountain High School captured his fifth title of the summer when he defeated second-seeded Craig Oswald of Parkland, 10-3 in the finals of the 126-pound class.

Heavyweight Al Lewis of Stroudsburg won his weight class when he was awarded a referee's decision over top-seeded Rich Koch of Lehigh. The two wrestlers tied 4-4 in regulation and 1-1 in overtime.

Lewis decided Steve Ferry, 1-0 in his first bout and then outpointed Sam Shook of Nazareth, 2-1 to reach the heavyweight finals.

Odom, the top-seed at 126, had a first round bye and then went on to decision Frank Difelice of Notre Dame (Green Pond), 5-0 and Tim Osborn of Petersburg, 5-2 to reach the finals.

Bob Hemhausen of Stroudsburg finished third in the 140-pound competition. Hemhausen bowed in the semi-finals to Randy Miller of Blair Academy, 6-4, and then came back to outpoint Tom Melville, 3-0 to earn third place.

Phillies miss an opportunity to close in on Pirates

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Gary Matthews drove in four runs with a pair of homers Sunday to power the San Francisco Giants to an 8-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Giants banged out 12 hits against five Phils' pitchers to help Jim Barr, 10-9, pick up the victory. Starter Dick Ruthven, 1-1, took the loss.

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the third when Steve Ontiveros scored on an infield single by Von Joshua, and Matthews made it 2-0 in the fourth on a solo homer.

The Giants scored three more in the fifth to knock out Ruthven with Bobby Murcer's double key blow. Ontiveros walked and Joshua and Darrell Thomas singled for a run. Murcer doubled in another and Willie Montanez then brought home Thomas with a sacrifice fly.

Thomas doubled and Murcer walked before Matthews connected for his second homer of the day and sixth of the season.

Astros, 5-3

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skip Jutze's two-run single highlighted a four-run first inning. Sunday and the Houston Astros went on to hand the Pittsburgh Pirates their fifth straight loss, 5-3, behind the pitching of James Rodney Richard and Mike Cosgrove.

Richard was touched for just one hit in six innings, but walked 10 batters and had thrown 120 pitches when he was taken out by manager Preston Gomez after giving up a walk to pinch-hitter Ed Kirkpatrick opening the seventh inning. Cosgrove came on to preserve Richard's eighth win of the season against seven losses.

The Astros jumped out with four runs in the first. Singles by Greg Gross and Cesar Cedeno and an intentional walk to Doug Rader filled the bases when loser Jim Rooker (8-8) walked Tommy Helms with two out to force in the first run.

Jutze then hit a two-run single and the fourth run of the inning scored on the same play when Manny Sanguillen threw the ball wildly to third.

Cedeno doubled, stole third and came home on Helms' single in the fifth for the final Houston run.

Dodgers, 2-1

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Hale's home run and Steve Yeager's run-scoring single in the fourth inning Sunday backed the three-hit pitching of Don Sutton to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 2-1 victory over the New York Mets.

The victory was a National League high 16th for Sutton, against nine defeats. Hale cracked his sixth homer of the year to lead off the fourth against Mets' starter Hank Webb, who suffered his fifth loss in nine decisions. Steve Garvey then walked, took second on Ron Cey's single and advanced to third on a long fly out before scoring on Yeager's single to left.

The Mets scored their only run in the bottom of the fourth when Rusty Staub singled, only the second hit off Sutton, and moved to third when Wayne Garrett walked and John Milner bounced into a force out. Mike Phillips brought Staub home with a single to right.

The only other hit off Sutton was a ground single past his glove by Del Unser in the third inning.

Sutton allowed only two more base runners after the Mets scored their lone run, hitting Felix Millan with a pitch and walking Ed Kranepool.

Cardinals, 3-2

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lou Brock singled in Mike Tyson with the winning run after Ken Reitz' solo homer tied the game in the 10th inning Sunday, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Tito Fuentes gave San Diego a 2-1 lead in the top of the 10th with his third homer, but the one-out blast by Reitz, his fourth of the year, evened the score again. Tyson and pinch-hitter Bake McBride followed with singles off San Diego reliever Bill Greif and Rich Folkers came in to yield Brock's game winning single.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Cecil Cooper and Jim Rice each hit two-run homers Sunday, igniting a 5-3 Red Sox triumph over the Oakland A's that hiked Boston's lead in the American League East to seven games.

The defeat shaved Oakland's edge over Kansas City in the AL West to 5 1/2 games.

Both Boston homers came off loser Dick Bosman, 7-4. Cooper's 10th of the year followed Bernie Carbo's single in the first inning. Then in the fourth, Rice stroked his 19th behind a walk to Cooper.

Luis Tiant, 14-11, went seven innings to post his first victory in more than three weeks. He was touched for five hits, including a two-run homer by Gene Tenace following Joe Rudi's single in the fourth inning.

Jim Willoughby, the third Red Sox pitcher, came on in the ninth to register his seventh save after Oakland scored its third run on a sacrifice fly by Tenace.

The Red Sox added a final run in the ninth when Dwight Evans doubled and scored on Doug Griffin's two-out single.

Angels, 1-0

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Lee Stanton doubled home Tommy Harper from second base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and Bill Singer and Mickey Scott combined for a four-hit shutout Sunday in a 1-0 California

Angel victory over the New York Yankees.

After yielding only two hits in the first eight innings, loser Rudy May gave up a walk and two hits in the ninth to lose for the seventh time against 11 victories. Singer went the first eight innings for the Angels, giving up just four hits. Scott retired all three batters he faced in the ninth to record his third victory in four decisions.

Rookie Dave Collins opened the ninth inning rally with the fourth walk off May. Harper hit into a force play trying to bunt Collins to second. Then Bobby Valentine singled to center to put Harper on second. Stanton, the Angels' leading RBI producer, laced his double down the third base line to drive in his 53rd run of the season.

White Sox, 3-2

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jorge Orta's run-scoring double and Brian Downing's two-run homer triggered a three-run ninth inning uprising Sunday that carried the Chicago White Sox to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Orta's double over Paul Blair's head with one out in the bottom of the ninth scored Pat Kelly from first base after Downing had tied the score earlier in the inning with a two-run homer.

The loss ended the Orioles' seven-game winning streak.

Royals, 5-1

CLEVELAND (UPI) — John Mayberry extended his hitting streak to 14 games by driving in four runs including a three-run homer Sunday to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 5-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Mayberry's 26th homer of the year equalled his career high set in 1972 and upped his RBI total to 81. The big first baseman is hitting .453 in his last 18 games and .365 since July 1 which includes 17 homers and 45 RBIs.

The Royals batted around in the third against Cleveland starter Eric Raich, 6-7. Fred Patek opened with a single and stole second. Al Cowens beat out an infield hit and Amos Otis fouled out. Mayberry followed with his homer.

Brewers, 7-4

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — George Scott collected four hits, including a homer, scored twice and drove in three runs Sunday to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-4 win over the Texas Rangers.

The win snapped a six-game loss streak for the Brewers, who had also lost nine in a row at home.

Scott singled in the first, hit run-scoring singles in the third and fourth and belted his 24th home run with no one on in the sixth.

Pete Broberg, who came on with the bases loaded and one out in the fourth inning and got Jeff Burroughs to hit into a double play, allowed two hits into the ninth to even his record at 10-10. Tom Murphy relieved in the ninth.

Twins, 4-0

DETROIT (UPI) — Bert Blyleven sent the Detroit Tigers down to their 15th straight loss, extending their own club record for consecutive defeats, by pitching a four-hitter Sunday to give the Minnesota Twins a 4-0 victory.

Jerry Terrell doubled and Rod Carew hit a pinch-hit sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to give the Twins their first two runs off loser Ray Bare, 6-7. Detroit has not scored a run in its last 20 innings and has only one in its last 28.

Minnesota, which did not have any outfield putouts Saturday, got only three this time as the staggering Tigers succumbed to Blyleven with barely a struggle.

The Twins rightlander struck out six and walked just one batter in raising his record to 11-6. He faced the minimum number of batters through the first six innings.

A BIT OF LOOSE PLAY — Phillies' catcher Johnny Oates lunges to grab a late throw from first baseman Dick Allen as San Francisco's Steve Ontiveros crosses the plate with a third-inning run. The play began when third baseman Mike Schmidt made a throwing error on Von Joshua's grounder which permitted Ontiveros to score all the way from second base. (UPI)

In case anyone had forgotten about it, Stroudsburg High School is still without a varsity basketball coach. But the School Board is about to act.

A source who should know tells us that Paul Romano, who became junior varsity coach at the mid-way point of the 1973-1974 season and held that post last season, will be the new varsity coach and the board will officially name him at its Aug. 20 meeting.

Romano and Bill Reese, who filled in the last portion of last season's schedule after Ed Brannan quit in a much-ballyhooed incident, were thought to be the two top contenders for the post.

If our source is right, Romano will get the job Aug. 20.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — To achieve worthwhile goals now, you will need the cooperation of others, so don't be overly aggressive or try to force issues. Tact!

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Be sure with whom you make agreements, commitments. All situations may not please, but keep trying. Those showing least promise may turn out most satisfying.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Influences somewhat mixed. There may be more than meets the eye in some situations. Be alert, but not overly suspicious.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — A time for re-evaluating your position, your attitude, your approach to all matters. With all in clear focus, you can stabilize "cloudy" situations.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Favored for rapid advancement: business matters, research, theatrical interests; also educational activities, political and scientific pursuits. A good day!

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Generous planetary influences favor new enterprises, with gratifying returns indicated. Coast is clear for ACTION — but within reason.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — There are tendencies now to take off on tangents and to ease up in effort just when more persistence is needed. Don't fail yourself by yielding to such inclinations.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Your intuition and fine judgment in familiar activities will be a boon in tight spots now. You COULD try something new if so inclined, but don't go beyond your depth.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — A good day for starting or developing new business associations. An unusual idea could spark a brand new approach in career matters, as well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — You may face keen competition, but your abilities will be stimulated if you believe in yourself and make the best of your many fine talents. Direct activities thoughtfully.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — A gigantic step may not be necessary; several smaller ones may bring you to your goals with surer footing, help you to launch the unusual with enduring success.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — You will have access to some extraordinary gains now if you move with forethought and know-how. Neptune, propitious, stimulates your intuition and quick thinking.

YOU BORN TODAY are a dynamic, ambitious and versatile individual, but extremely self-willed. There are many fields in which you could succeed, but the theater will be the most satisfying outlet for your talents — either as playwright, actor, director or producer; as a dramatic critic, too.

Opening lead — nine of spades.

It is hard to believe that this deal was played as described here, but the plain unvarnished fact is that it did. It occurred last year in the national mixed pair championship in San Antonio, Texas.

Obviously, something went wrong with the bidding when South wound up as declarer in seven notrump redoubled, missing an ace.

The fault is not hard to find.

It can be traced to North's five spade response to Blackwood, showing three aces. North undoubtedly treated the diamond void as the equivalent of an ace — which is of course a wrong thing to do — and it was this departure from the straight and narrow that led South to bid seven notrump. However, South wound up making the grand slam and thereby scored 2,930 points! West had a difficult choice of opening leads and unluckily chose the nine of spades. A heart lead would have settled declarer's hash immediately — down one, 400 points — while a fourth best club lead would have put South down five, assuming best defense, for a loss of 2,800!

But the nine of spades lead handed South the contract! It permitted him to win the spade in dummy with the ten, return the seven of spades to his eight, and in that way cash his diamonds, which would otherwise have withered on the vine. It is rare indeed for a player to lose 5,730 points because of a wrong opening lead, but that's precisely what it cost West for choosing a spade instead of club as his opening shot.

West didn't sleep very well that night!

OUR NATION'S FOUNDERS KNEW THAT FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IS VITAL TO A DEMOCRACY...

that's why it is included in the very first amendment to our Constitution, as part of our Bill of Rights. Without that free exchange of information among its citizens, no democracy can survive for long. The freedom that the press has exercised since the earliest days of this nation have helped to make America a citadel of democracy. Let's not tamper with the very foundations of that structure . . . let's preserve the rights our founding fathers gave us.

Devices form death traps

Fear of crime locks victims into own cages

By MARK LEONARD

Dow Jones-Offaway News
WASHINGTON — If there had not been iron bars on an apartment's windows and a double lock on its door, young Corita and Darlene Wheeler might have escaped the flames that killed them. The girls and their brother, Kevin, who survived the fire, had been left alone in a sealed apartment here; attempts by firemen to rescue them were slowed by the burglarproofing hardware. In May, a Brooklyn, N.Y., woman and her two sons died of smoke inhalation before they could unlock the accordion-like iron gates covering their home's windows; earlier this year, a Washington, D.C. man, unable to open the padlock door to a fire escape, suffocated.

Film bow

PARIS (UPI) — Regine, French popular singer and nightclub owner, has been signed by producer-director Herbert Ross to make her American film bow as a dramatic actress in a Universal production, "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution," a film version of the Nicholas Meyer novel. Nicol Williamson will play the role of Sherlock Holmes, Laurence Olivier will be Prof. Moriarty, and Vanessa Redgrave has been cast as an opera singer. Regine will play a bordello madam.

Fire-protection officials are just beginning to assess the impact of a growing and perhaps ill-named category of fire hazards: security devices. "It's crazy: People do not seem to understand that devices such as bars on windows and double locks on doors, designed to keep people out, will also, in an emergency, keep them in," says Paul Sawin, a spokesman for the National Fire Protection Association, a clearing-house of fire-safety information.

Crazy or not, the crime-prevention business is brisk and most of its products fall outside the prohibitions of city fire and building codes. New York City and Washington, D.C. prohibit locked gates, gates, guards, or bars across fire-escape exit doors in apartment buildings and public buildings such as schools and hospitals; they have no jurisdiction over such paraphernalia in private homes. "Man's

Gambler junkets

FREEPORT, Bahamas (UPI) — Bahamasair, the national airline, has inaugurated "gambler junket" flights nightly between Miami and this resort city. Total cost to El Casinero here and back is $36, and those making the trip are not required to gamble.

home is his castle," says John P. Breen, chief of Washington's Fire-prevention Division, "and the calculated risks he takes against fire are his own."

Crime and the fear of it in cities and suburbs can offset fire-safety considerations. "I'd say that 80 per cent of my customers for window bars have had their homes broken into recently," says Willie Williams, shop foreman for Interstate Ironworks, Inc., of Hyattsville, Md. "Our salesmen sometimes warn them about fire hazards; most customers think nothing like that could happen to them."

Or perhaps they share the view of William D. McInerney, an administrator of the National Crime Prevention Institute in Louisville, Ky. "While we recognize fire dangers, we believe that crime-security problems are equally important," McInerney says. "Fire-prevention experts don't think about all the people who are murdered and the women who are raped every year. They only see their side of the problem and won't work with us in the crime-prevention field to come up with ideas for hardware that's safe and secure," he says.

Window hardware now on the market includes plain and ornamental iron bars; more expensive hinged bars that can be unlocked and opened in an emergency; and indoors, accordionlike window gates and guards that are pad-locked in place. The only window coverings fire officials even conditionally approve are similar folding gates with easy-open latch, rather than lock, attachments.

"But we think those take away a person's complete security," says Ken Klein, an officer of a large security-equipment company in New York City. "With the permanent bars, there's no way of getting out in a fire; with the pad-locked gates, there's more security and at least a percentage in finding the key when you need it."

That's the problem with locked gates; locked, barred doors; and the variety of double-cylinder, dead-bolt locks that require the use of a key from both the inside and outside: In an emergency, attempts to find and efforts to use the keys are often fruitless.

It makes Washington's Breen nervous to think that his desk drawer is filled with padlocks that he's found being used illegally on the exits of Washington, D.C., schools. "School officials want to keep the riffraff out," says Breen, "so they lock their own students in. Where would the key be if there was a fire?"

Most model building codes require that at least one exit door in a dwelling open readily without a key; the National Fire Protection Association's life-safety code prohibits window openings smaller than 22 inches. Yet enforcing these codes is another story. "People are determined to resolve the crime problem," says Breen, "even if that means creating a fire-safety one."

Greek cruises

ATHENS (UPI) — Greece and Egypt are examining the possibility of closer collaboration on tourism, with more Greek cruise ships calling at Alexandria and Port Said and the use of floating hotels on the Nile. The president of the National Tourist Organization, George Daskalakis, said on his return from talks in Cairo that "a study is being planned of the best methods of realizing closer cooperation between our two countries in the field of tourism."

Robot sets off to find if there's life on Mars

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The United States sets out next week on a bold expedition to search for life on the planet Mars.

The $1 billion adventure is scheduled to begin with the launch at 4:59 p.m. EDT today of the first of two Viking robot explorers, most complicated unmanned spacecraft ever built. The second is set to follow 10 days later.

Mars is now 180 million miles from earth, but it will take the first Viking almost 10 months and 505 million miles of interplanetary travel to overtake the red planet.

Viking 1 is scheduled to swing into orbit around Mars June 18, 1976, to begin scouting its landing site at the mouth of a 3,000 mile-long canyon in a northern hemisphere region known as Chryse. If everything goes according to plan, the first of the two landers will land gently on the Martian surface on July 4 — the nation's 200th birthday.

Each Viking, consisting of an orbiter and a lander, is packed with instruments that will carry out 13 separate scientific investigations, including two cameras that will radio back the first pictures of Mars as seen from the ground.

The most intriguing question the Vikings will attempt to answer is whether Mars harbors life of any kind.

"I really can't tell you what we're looking for, but if we find Martian biology, there isn't any doubt that it probably will change our lives," said Dr. Gerald A. Soffen, NASA's project scientist for the Viking project.

He said in a report written for the Martin Marietta Corp., builder of the Viking landers, that the question of life on Mars is a common thread in the interest of all 70 scientists responsible for the Viking studies.

"Without exception, the Viking scientist has in one way or another been enticed by the question of biology, whether he was a biologist or not," he said.

Each Viking carries three biology instruments that will analyze soil scooped up by a radio-controlled digger to see if the dirt harbors organisms.

Project scientists say the chances are slim that life will be found, especially on the first look. But all agree that Mars has the best chance of any of the eight other planets of harboring some sort of living thing.

"I have placed it at something approaching one chance in 20 that there is now life on Mars," said Dr. Harold P. Klein, biologist at NASA's Ames Research Center, Mountain View, Calif. But, he said, "there is a much higher chance that we will find some evidence for chemicals related to life."

"In trying to conceive of forms of life on Mars, one dominant thing to note is the temperature variation which even at the equator can vary from 90 degrees Fahrenheit in the daytime to 100 degrees F.

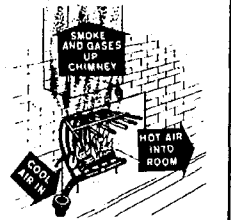

below zero at night," Klein said.

"The organisms on Earth that seem to function well while going through big temperature changes tend to be the simpler organisms such as bacteria, lichens, fungi and molds."

SHOP BETTER WITH A&P'S MEAT IDENTITY LABELS

Our meat labels end the guesswork in meat buying. They assist you in identifying the cuts that best suit your needs. At a glance, you can tell the kind of meat, the primal cut and the uniform name for the retail cut. Weight, price per pound and total price are also shown.

One More Reason to Shop A&P

WE WANT YOU TO SEE BOTH SIDES OF THE MEAT

Now, with our new transparent trays, you can see both sides of the meat before you buy it, and the meat stays neat, because the tray will not soften, break or leak. We go through a lot to bring you what we think is the best in meat, and this new tray helps keep it that way.

ADVERTISED ITEM AVAILABILITY

A&P always stocks up heavily on advertised specials. But if we ever run out, we'll be glad to give you a rain check for that item at the special price, or if you wish, a comparable item at the sale price.

One More Reason to Shop A&P

GUARANTEED SATISFACTION

A&P's guarantee is very simple, very clear. You must be completely satisfied with everything you buy or we'll refund the full purchase price cheerfully.

One More Reason to Shop A&P

OUR BUTCHER'S PLEDGE

We promise to always pack the better side of every cut down. If you like the side you see in the store, You'll love what you see at home.

AROUND THE CLOCK... SAVINGS!

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE OPEN 24 HOURS

You don't pay extra for the convenience of 24-hour shopping at A&P. Our stores always worked around the clock for cleaning and stocking. Our lights and refrigeration were always on. Our rent and taxes applied day and night. The only thing we did was open our doors and add a small staff... to serve you better at the same low prices. So come on in, Shop with confidence at any hour, because at A&P, we're working for you... When you're pleased, we're pleased. Open 24 hours a day.
